EAST BERLIN—Two East German delivery foremen, both Communist Party members, finished a hot day's work the other day and dropped in at a small cafe off the Friedrichstrasse for a cold pilsner beer hrewed

The beer is absolutely awful in Moscow," said Gerd Humboldt, not his real name because he said he was afraid of the Communist Party's reaction to a West-ern "interview." He knows about beer in Moscow because he has often beeo there on business.

Then he did something people don't usually do in Mos-cow and invited two Western visitors to see his apartment in Lichtenberg, a district of prewar tenement houses. His wife, Elfi, was reading on a plush blue couch, surrounded by modern artificial-wood bookcases thet Mr. Humboldt huilt himself. They are a voung couple, in their 30's, who dress informally and cheerfully.

The East Germao Communist Party is holding its ninth congress in Berlin and millions of people like the Humboldts look to its directives for confirmation that their high standard of living. already far higher than in the Soviet Union, will go oo

Life Is Non-Russian Tha East German party's loyalty to Moscow is un-matched in Eastern Europe, and yet daily life here is very European, very un-Russian. Tha Humboldts and thair 4year-old daughter live in three comfortably furnished and carpeted rooms, a larger apartment than many in Moscow, where entire families live together in a few rooms. They pay only $25 a month in rent. Mrs. Humboldt can buy stewing beef at $2 a pound at the Berlin market hall and the restaurants here do not have signs saying only fish is served on Thursdays, as do those io Moscow.

Few Can Travel to West Only 40,000 East Germans below retirement age were allowed to travel to the West last year, and Mrs. Humboldt was not one of them.

The paradox of e country that had to build a wall in 1961 to keep its workers and farmers from fleeing has left scars on millions of divided German families. This Communist Party congress, with 2,500 delegates and 750 guests in the gigantic white marble Palace of the Republic, built especially for the occasion does not account the occasion, does not escape the paradox.

Erich Honecker, the party's First Secretary, announced in a 45,000-word speech that East Germany would continue its policy of détente with West Germany, that 750,000 apartments like thet of the Humboldts would be built or renovated by 1980 and that there would be 20 to 22 percent more consumer goods on the market in four years, "with consumer prices remaining stable."

Every delegate was taking ootes as he spoke, though the speech had been prepared so long ago and so carefully that bound volumes in Eng-lish translation were availhle as be began speaking.

These people do not improvise," said a visitor from Moscow, but the East Germans, unlike the Russians, admit the Western press to their party congresses. Isolation Has Ended

Mr. Hooecker began this "Socialism with a Human Face" with the party congress in 1971. Since then, the country has emerged from years of diplomatic isolation to be racognized by every major Western power, includ-ing the United States and 118 other countries. Contiouing the "goulesh Communism" of improving living standards is the price the Government pays for the loyalty of 17 million walled-in subjects. But East Germany also owes a deht of loyalty to the Soviet Union. "It is an objective fact," a party member said over a quiet coffee at a sidewalk care in Pankow, 'that Socialism could never have been established on Ger-

U.S. EXPO '67 DOME DESTROYED BY FIRE

MONTREAL, May 20 iAP-A fire flashed through the old United States pavilion at the Expo 67 World's Fair site today, leaving the exhibit's geodesic dome a skeleton.

A welder working in the building when the fire started was unaccounted for, firemeo reported. A team of welders was at working and Reg Camreau, assistant chief of the Mootreal Fire Department said the fire might have been started by e welder's torch. The acrylic outer shell was destroyed, leaving only the alu-minum tubing that formed the distinctive framework of the dome, designed by R. Buckminster Fuller. The pavillon had been a land mark of the old Expo 67 site.

man soil if the Soviet Army hadn't brought it in 1945." The days when Soviet troops clasted their way into Berlin seemed far away as he sat in the sun under the linden trees, Thus the paradox: East Germany is the richest country of Eastern Europe. It makes Communism work better than it does in Poland or Czechoslovakia in terms of letting the people share in the fruits of their labors. But the price is absolute East German loyalty to a strict Soviet ideological line, in an age when Communist parties in Italy and France and even Rumania are abandooing it to win more power and independence from Moscow.

Highest Form of Democracy' With the Soviet Union's chief ideologist, Mikhail A. Suslov, sitting directly behind him at the congress, Mr. Honecker hlasted Communications of the control nists who have softened the line in hopes of winning vot-ters in the Western countries. The dictatorship of the proletariat," he declared, "represents the highest form of democracy in cootrast to the class-conditioned restrictions of democracy in the capitalist state." The remark was clearly aimed at the French and Italian Communist parties and others who have dropped "dictatorship of the prole-tariat" from their programs in hopes of winning votes. Mr. Hooecker's censure clearly had Moscow's backing.

The East German leader renewed a call to the errant members of the international Communist movement to recognize Moscow's leadership: Conference Is Planned

"It is our permanent task to strengthen the unity of the world Communist move-ment," he said. "This task includes warding off all attempts et disavowing Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism as the theoretical and political base for tha activity of the Commo-nist movement, et undermining its unity and thus weakening its fighting strength." Q. What role is your Government playing concern-ing a reduction of inter-Arab tensions between Syria and Egypt in Lebanon?

A. The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia always tries its best to keep the Arab political atmosphere clear. Even if the Culver amendment dies in the House-Senate conference on the procurement bill, it was apparent that a commitment to production of the B-1 bomber does not com-mand overwhelming support in Congress. At the same time, as was evidenced in the vote on the McGovern amendment, Congress is unwilling to kill a program that could mean jobs in 48 states.

Tha Federation of American Scientists, which has been lob-bying against the B-I program, saw a potential victory in the making in the favorable vote in the Senate and the close vote in the House. In a statement, the federation suggested that, in view of the lack of overwhelming Congressional support, a new Presidential administration, presumably meaning a Democratic administration, would feel free to review and kill the program, just as the Kennedy Administration killed the B-70 bomber pro-

The move tn defer a production decision was seized upon by the anti-B-1 lobby after it came to the conclusion that it could not rally the votes to kill the program. Following this strategy, the votes were set up today so that senators could vote first against the McGovern amendment to kill the program and then switch to vote for the Culver amendment to delay a production decision.

A national best-seller.

Another fascinating winner from the foremost political novelist of our time. The author of the hugely successful "Burr" gives us a consumate work of historical fiction . . . accurate to the smallest detail.

"... With malicious wit, irresistible gossip and sturdy research, he turns 1876 into an ornate 200th birthday card inscribed with a poison pen. Vidal has no peers at breathing movement and laughter into the historical past." -Paul Gray, Time Magazine

Fast Dutch Campus Reform Has Made Some Furious

Special to The New York Time AMSTERDAM-Student demands for university reform in the Netherlands achieved more immediate and farreaching results than elsewhere in Western Europe. So far-reaching are the results that protests are not largely limited to teachers who believe that the changes are threatening their freedom to Student demonstrations and occupation of university buildings in 1969 led to the

This is one of a series of articles appearing occasionally on recent changes in attitudes on European cam-

Government's introduction of the University Reorganiza-tion Act that year and its passage and enactment in

From a system in which full professors had nearly absolute control over studies, administration and the careers of all teachers below their rank, Dutch universities were democratized to share power at more or less parity among teachers, students

Even within the teachers' third of power, the full professors are reduced to sharing with all other instructors seats on bodies governing universities and their departments.

Although the results re-main highly contested within the universities, rarely does the conflict now become a focus of national attention. Critical educators say that this is a result of the activist students' having gained what they desired and having little left to protest against.

Most of the protests today come from teachers and are kept largely within the uni-versity. The essence of their objections is that the changes, which many of them advo-cated and some helped to initiate in 1969, have shifted power from professors, some of whom had authoritarian notions of teaching, to a co-alition of student and instructor activists on behalf of revolution against bourgeois capitalism in the name of Marxism.

'Threat' to Freedom

They conteod that, in the face of general political apa-thy. Marxist militants hold most of the student seats on governing bodies and many the places allotted to teachers and administrative employees. The militants use the power, in this critical view, to advance their cause by politicizing university teaching and staffing. The critics maintain that the militants are a threat to academic

"Part of this charge is of course true," said Annemarie Grewel, president of the Amsterdam, the country's largest with an enrollment of 22,000.

Prof. Hans Daudt, head of the university's Political Science institute, has gone on strike to protest against "bureaucratic violence" to his freedom to teach.

But Miss Grewel, a blunt woman in purple smock and faded corduroy pants, said that the "terrible quarrels" that had occurred were ex-ceptional. She said that critics of university reform coocentrated oo "extreme exam-

She said that the changes had "improved the welfare of students and teachers." Students, she said, have "more rights, are better motivated and bave become a part of the system they have to function in." She said that professors were now "much less isolated."

She cooceded that some professors did not enjoy the new system. She said that her own professor in the division where she herself teaches got furious" when her authority was reduced.

"But we made a fist and she accepted," she continued. "Two years later she resigned. Now she is writing books and is very happy.

the University of Pennsylvania and other American schools of architecture, recalled the euphoria he felt during the student movement. in 1969.

"When I came in 1966, the atmosphere was stuffy and the professors authoritariao," he recalled. "It was a wonderful momeot when everything opened up. We thought, 'Now we are among our-selves and can start happily on a new architecture."

"But theo the problems of architecture disappeared and politics began, It all became a question of changing so-clety rather than architec-ture. Architecture almost got drowned. The architecture department is almost entirely in the hands of radical stu-dents and younger teachers. They do nothing but govern the school instead of teachlog and being taught. They just govern, govern, govern,

'No Solution' "I wouldn't mind at all If the great percentage of peo-ple were Marxists, if they only used their brains, A weird and almost absurd con-cept of what architecture is is developing. It is an attack without an answer. They ofier no solution."

"They say architecture should be scientific and ob-jective and must be Marxist,"

Mr. van Eyck went on.
"There is no such thing as Marxist construction; there is science departments, the most politicized area of teaching, is "quite bad." Marxist thought—no Marxist bricks." "My colleagues and 1 are. accused of humanism, representing the last stage of a humanistic concept that be-began in the Reoaissance. We are no longer relevant and they don't talk with people who are oo longer relevant." scholarship. "An extreme form of unbelievable centralization and bureaucracy have taken over," he said. "It is a dictatorship of boys and girls who haven't completed their edu-cation. It smacks of fascism. They are trying to argue in the name of everybody the obsolescence of architecture materialism" and would work from "this scientific point of view." because they don't know how

"Design has been replaced by reports of 2,200 pages. People are finishing their ar-chitectural studies without creating a design, just words and statistics. "There is contempt for the individual and for quality. They are very brutal. Their index is even stricter than to do it.'

Urged to Stay On

Mr. van Eyck said that af-ter ne and his conceptes an-nounced their resignation, 1,400 of 2,200 students had signed a petition urging them to stay and demanding radical changes in the school. The issue will presumably stay alive until a new governing body is elected.

Dr. Marius Broekmeyer of the East European Institute of Amsterdam University, a longtime Marxist and advocate of university reform, turned opposent of the new left, speaks of Turneau de violence" to academic freedom. A colleague of his, Prof. Hans Dandt, head of the university's Political Science Institute, has been on a teaching strike for more than three years to protest what he considers this "violence."

Angered by what he re-gards as infringement of academic freedom - systematic disruptions of lectures given by politically unpopu-lar professors, changing his course requirements and reading lists against his wishes, occupation of his in-stitute—Professor Daudt, a right-wing socialist, decided to adopt similar tactics. The university'a administrative board issued an order to him to return to his normal duties as tenaot of the most highly esteemed chair in political science in the Netherlands, But Mr. Daudt was upbeld by all other pro-fessors in his field in the country, by the academic council that coordinates all Dutch universities, by the administrative court and its appeals division, by the com-mission charged with interpreting the university reform law and fically by Parlia-

Values Are Argued

A fundamental argument on scholarship and a schol-ar's responsibility has been engaged. Critics of present conditions are accused of believing in "valoe-free" teach-ing and research—that is, scholarship based on ideological objectivity. The Marxists contend that this is impossible and cloaks an capitalist values and a refusal by scholars to accept responsibility for the appli-cations of their work by the rulers of the present power

They oppose this in favor of scholarship with a view toward applying the results to fundamental political

Miss Grewel said that she did not think "value-free" teaching existed and added: In research in social science, a bit of politics has gone in and I think it is better like that. Some people get a bit emotional and say, 'I can't do my work wheo people ask me what's the valoe of your work."

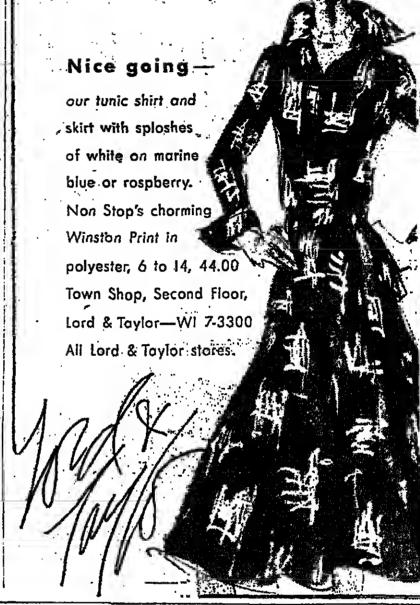

Rome and Marx

Marxism is as important at the Roman Catholic universities of Nijmegen and Tilburg, eotirely state-sup-ported as are all Dutch universities, as at the others. Discussing the present mood throughout the universities, Dr. Karel van het Reve, professor of Russian literature at Leiden University and one who welcomes the more relaxed atmosphere in his classes, said: "The Catholics switched from one dogma to the other, from Rome to Marx. At first, it was that no sex was allowed if its aim was not procreation. Now no scholarship is allowed unless its aim is to improve society."

"Can't some one just want to learn the poems of Pushkin because he loves them?" "We are for the experilute misuse," said Professor van Eyck. 'The experiment should continue, but in com-

Most people can only dream of enjoying legendary German engineering, it can cost

$13,000 or even a great deal more. The Audi 100LS is $7,100°; roughly half. The Audi

Fox is $5,100": an extraordinary value. The basic thing all these German-engineered cars have in common is the drive for perfection. The attention to detail. The identical thinking and feeling about how a carshould be made. So it's no wonder that both of our Audis share safety and performance and handling features with the most expensive German cars.

Both have front-wheel drive, rack-and-pinion steering and CIS fuel injection. Even steelbelted radial tires and child-proof locks are standard equipment.

The Audi 100LS is classically styled and impeccably finished, as a great luxury car should be. The Audi Fox is a spirited sports sedan, a touch smaller and even more nimble (0-50 in 8 sec-Happily, the 100LS delivers 30 mpg on the highway, 20 mpg in the city. Astonishingly, the Fox gets 37 mpg on the highway, 24 mpg in the city. (EPA estimates, standard shift. Your actual mpg may vary with how and where you drive, your car's condition and optional equipment.)

If $13,000 sounds like a lot of money for one great car, you can buy 2 great Audis for the same price.

clean up

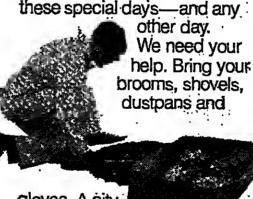

America has a great past and the potential for a great future. But that future depends on us. One thing we'd all like to see is a cleaner city. Inspired by the Reverend Sun Myung 1500 members of the Bicentennial God Bless America Committee have initiated a great clean-up project for New York City. Every morning since May 3rd these young men and women have been sweeping up our streets, working to enhance. their beauty and dignity.

This project is called the America the Beautiful Program and we hope everyone will participate. In the remainder of May we're setting aside three days in which we're making special efforts to clean up particular parts of the city. The days are tomorrow, May 22nd and next Friday and Saturday the 28th and 29th. Areas we'll clean are described below.

We hope you'll join us on these special days—and any other day.

gloves. A city that's cleaned is a city that's loved. With that love, we are sure New York can truly prosper. In addition to joining us on these days, we'd like to make these suggestions:

1. Let's avoid littering even the smallest item. It's amazing how fast the streets can become strewn.

2. Let's everyone do his fair share. If every business and home cleans their own area, the city will be spotless. Together we can do it!

The America the Beautiful Program is a tangible expression of the Spirit of the Bicentennial God Bless America Festival. The Festival's purpose is to inspire all Americans to truly create One Nation Under God and work for One World Under God. One step in accomplishing this goal is to create a clean and beautiful environment where God's Spirit can dwell. The Bicentennial God Bless America Festival, featuring

Reverend Moon as the principal speaker, is being held June 1st at Yankee Stadium. This will be a opportunity to hear Reverend Moon and see why his leadership has given new hope to thousands around: the world. We encourage all New Yorkers to come. But before attending the Festival, we urge you to join us in cleaning up New York. If everyone does a little, together we can do a lot. C'mon out and get into the Spirit! For more information, please call 730-5715.

Bring your broom and let's clean up! We'll be cleaning from 9:00 A.M. to Noon on the following days:

ROSEMONT, N.J. - The American shad, a bony but sweet flesbed fish whose roe is highly prized by gourmets, is the subject of study by biologists of the Delaware River Basin Anadromous Fish Project bere.

An anadromous is one that spawns in fresh waters but attains both growth and ma-turity in the ocean. Some anadromous fish—the West Coast salmons are an example—spawn and the act of procreation is quickly followed by death. But the American or white shad, Alosa sapidissima, like the Atlantic salmon, can be a repeat spawner.

Once the most productive shad rivers on the Atlantic Coast-from Florida to New Brunswick, Me.—the Dela-ware now yields about 100,-000 pounds annually to commercial and sport fishermen. At its peak in the 1890's, the

All is not gloom nn tha Delaware, however, for from the years of almost no shad in the 1950's, the river now supports an annual run of about 118,000 fish. If the pollution can be abated, if the still-alive Tocks Island impoundment project can be laid to rest forever, and if the water releases from the New York City reservoirs-Pepaton and Cannonsville on the east and west branches of the Delaware can be conducted with ecological sanity, then there is little doubt that the once enormous runs of this splendid food and game fish can be

HARTFORD, May 20 — Coonecticut's late-starting joyride into legalized gam-hling accelerated to 150 miles an hour here tonight as pelo-tas began bouncing like rifle shots off the granite front

By the end of tonight's 12game gprogram, even naive first-timers in the crowd of 4,000 had learned that jaialai is pronounced "hi lie," and that a losing ticket at a jai-alai footon is worth exactly the same as one at a horse or dog track.

15-Minute Opener

It took 15 minutes to pley the first game, a doubles match involving eight twoman teams with jersey colors similar to those used in dog racing. When it was over, and the fans had exhorted their heroes with such personalized shouts as ."C'mon seven" or "Go you four," the long-shot team of Goitia and Umberto had produced a $26.20 win payoff for No. 5.

There is no daily double here, but each game has a $2 quinella, a $3 perfects and a $3 trifecta. The historic opening payoffs were $37.40 on the 2-5 quinella, $101.70 on the 5-2 perfects and $2,-372 on the 5-8 trifecta. Judging from the operatic cheers that greeted the better-known players in the pre-competition ceremonies, it was obvious tha at least some of the fans recognized their favorites from Florida action. Some of the loudest support was for Joey,

Then, when Lonborg oeeded help to gain his sixth straight victory, the help was supplied by the intercity brat, McGraw, who stopped the Mets for the final two and two-thirds innings.

For the Mets, who have stumbled badly in recent days, the loss was No. 5 in their last six starts end it left them in third place in the National League's East, 4½ games behind Philadel-phia. For the visitors, only sunshine: eight victories in nine games, 15 in their 12s: 18 end a club record of 12 straight on the road.

"I left fine, but I was overstriding." Seaver said after suffering his third straight defeat after four victories, though he pitched the dishits after his rough start. "Trying to analyze it, every-thing comes out sounding like an excuse, and I don't want to do that.

hitters injected into the lineup for tactical reasons. Johnstone doubled to right for another run and Tommy Hutton singled to right for the fourth. Before the flying Phils subsided, Boh Tolan chipped in a single, hut Seaver knuckled down and faced nnly two batters more than the minimum for the rest of the game. In fact, he didn't allow another hit until Lonborg singled in the seventh and, by then, the Mets were creepng closer.

They had managed one single in each of the first four innings off Lonborg, but hadn't advanced anybody past third base, a chronic nil-ment laiely. Then in the sixth, John Milner singled with one down and Kingman lifted the next pitch down-town. It bounced off the blue seats in the second deck past

In 1940, when Jack Dempsey was 45 years old, he hoxed a bald and paunchy rassier named Cowhoy Luttrell in Atlanta, where Jack, refereeing a rassling card two months earlier, had disqualified Luttrell and taken a punch oo the jaw for it. Now they faced each other again in the park of the Southern League Crackers and Dempsey, awaiting the opening bell, sat on an upended beer case. "It was like finding Sarah Bernhardt tap dancing in a hurlesque show," wrote Stewart Owen of The Chicago Tribune. "A Michelangelo drawing smutty pictures on a washroom wall, a Man o' War hitched to a garbage

This wasn't boxer vs. wrestler like the Ali-Inoki thing, for Luttreil recklessly put on gloves with the old mauler. In spite of his age, Jack beat the chump bloody, dropped him three times and knocked him out of the ring, all in a round and a half. . .

Archie Apprehended

Another glove match between boxer and wrestler was witnessed in Phoenix, Ariz., in 1963. This one paired Archie Moore with one Iron Mika DiBiase. After a round or two, authorities in a position to know ruled Moore the winner by a knockout. Archie never expected news of the caper to get out, but he forgot that several major league teams were training in the area. When friends of his from the New York, Boston and Chicago press walked into his dressing room, he couldn't conceal his mortification.

It has been demonstrated many times that rasslers, basketball players, wearers of the black belt and even pitchers-turned-sportscasters can't put on gloves and last two rounds with a professional fighter or even an ameteur above novice ranks. Let the rassler go in barehanded, though, and if the performance is oo the level, the boxer will stand no chance. All the rassler need do is hit the floor, where he is safe, and go for the legs.

Years ago when rassling was prospering in St. Louis, the promoter, Tom Packs, did what he could to give boxing a bad name in the town. To this end, he imported King Levinsky for a mixed match, boxer vs. rassler, with Ray Steele, the same character whose bones Londos yearned to snap like sticks. The Kingfish was a fairly vincible heavyweight, but when he wound up and pitched a right hand from deep center field he could make the arena sway, and he and his sister-manager, Leaping Lena, made a colorful pair.

The hell rang and for reasons hest known to himself, Steele walked toward Levinsky, who smote him on the forehead, raising a red welt but doing no damage. Steele dived for the Levinsky ankles, flipped him, pinned him. Elapsed time, maybe 14 seconds.

Somebody who listens to radio and watches television said he heard Bob Arum, the closed-circuit promoter, interviewed on the air recently. He was asked whether Inoki, as a professional rassler, had not been involved in take contests. Mayhe, Arum said, but this one was on the level.

Ali-Dunn Fight Survives Near Financial Knockout

BONN, West Germany, May 20 (AP)—Muhammad Ali's heavyweight boxing title defense against Richard Dunn of England was nearly called off today, but a compromise involving $160,000 resolved a problem that had left Ali sayiog; "It wouldn't have burt me noce to go home." Bob Arum, chairman of Top Rank, Inc., a co-promoter of the fight with a German corporation called Promot, had accused the German promo-ters this morning of failing to come up with a $225,000 segment of Ali's purse. He said the fight would be can-celed if the promoters failed to meet their obligations. The money was equivalent to the amount Ali would pay in German taxes on the fight in Munich next Tuesday (Monday night, New York time). Arum said the problem was resolved when tax officials agreed to reduce the amount to $160,000 and Promot promised to have the money in hand by the week-

It left Ali $65,000 short of the original contract, but Arum said Herbert Muhammad. Ali's manager, agreed to waive the money for what were described as other considerations. Ali's total nurse was listed as $1.65 million. Ali, who finished his sparring sessions today, told re-porters he discussed the problems with his manager on the telephone.

Ali said: "It wouldn't have hurt me none to go home. I left it to my manager. The important thing was that I got in condition here worth $20 million. I'm in perfect shape now for the wrestler and Norton."

Ali will fight an exhibition against a Japanese wrestler, Antonio Inola, in Tokyo for $6 million next month. He is scheduled to face Norton for about $9 million in New York on Sept. 27.

Arum said he felt the prob-

Officials of World Jai-Alki, Inc., the Miami-based parent corporation of Hartford's operation, called tomight's parimutual debut "the beginning of a new ere." Paul Silvergleid, chairman of the Connecticut Gaming Com-mission, called it a "heauti-ful addition" to the state's gambling program.

"It's exciting," Silvergleid said at a cocktail party an hour before the opening. "We think jai-siai will be very well accepted. On a dull night when there's little else to do "t's a beautiful form." to do; it's a beautiful form of entertainment."

Just before post time, Silvergieid and other dignitaries, including Lieut. Gov. Robert T. Killian and Mayor George Athenson of Hartford, marched out pato the court waving cestas, the curved wicker baskets with which players catch and hurl the pelota Gov. Ella T. Grasso, who has said she wouldn't bet a nickel on anything, was a notable absentee.

Heevy publicity about pos-sible jams on access roads also apparently caused some other absentees, as the crowd fell short of expectations. Those that did show up were taken care of by nearly 500 employees, ranging from pari-mutuel clerks to cocktail waitresses in hot-pants and Telebat girls ferrying bets in white blouses, red and white slacks and white caps.

For many of the novice jai-slad fans, like Rich Romano of Manchester, Coun., the new game in town was hard to figure. 'I'm just playing numbers," said Romano, a 30-year-old horseplayer who prefers thoroughbred racing. Predictably, tonight's debut was hectic as well as festive. It was like an opening night at the theater—when the theater itselm is not quite ready.

Right up until the patrons began arriving at the $11 million fronton off Route 91, oorth of the downtown area, workmen were stuffing evergreens into the ground, removing debris, washing the tile floors, hoisting parking-lot light nowers onto their concrete bases, checking the facilities.

Cross said he looked at soccer as a potential moneymaking venture for the network, but not immediately. "Soccer still has a long way to go," Cross said later, "but this league has a fascinating story behind it and the presence of some good players gives it a boost."

"Besides these guys," Cross said looking at Pelé, Giorgio Chinaglia, Bob Rigby, Bob Smith, Keith Eddy and Ramoo Mifflin, all members of the

Philadelphia Story

The Mayor and City Council this week are "trimming millions of dollars from the budget for the next fiscal year, imposing big increases io old taxes and creating several new ones, freezing workers' salaries, authorizing long-term loans to pay short-term debts and still wonderiog if all that would be enough to keep the city afloat."

New York City? No. This familiar litany is part of a report to The Times this week from Philadelphia, latest victim of an urban crisis that threatens to spread from New York to major metropolitan centers across the country. Only last mooth, bankers in Detroit warned city officials there that unless they took drastic oew measures to cut municipal spending they would face "problems equal in gravity to those of New York City."

Circumstances differ from city to city. No city, including Philadelphia, yet faces a fiscal crunch so severe as that confronting New York, with its extraordinary burden of accumulated short-term deht. Philadelphia, for example, does not bear the heavy direct welfare load that ia inflicted on New York City as a result of New York

Nevertheless, Philadelphia's plight is another revealing symptom of a fundamental urban sickness, a disease caused by the flight of jobs and the affluent to the suburbs and the concentration of the nation's disadvantaged in central cities everywhere. National leaders, in the Administration and in Congress, need to recognize the seriousness of this urban malady, which could become an epidemic, and to attack it at its roots.

Although tighter fiscal discipline is still needed here and elsewhere, fiscal measures alooe will not solve the underlying problems and, in fact, could make them worse, as John R. Bunting, a Philadelphia banker, pointed out in a recent article for this newspaper. The Senate Banking Committee and the Treasury are on sound ground in insisting that New York clamp a firm lid oo excessive costs, especially inflated labor costs. But they are mistaken in insisting that this city-or any other city-can avoid catastrophe merely by adhering to the kiod of strict spending regime laid down io the threeyear financial plan.

Drastic changes are urgently needed in Federal policies that only encourage the exodus to suburbia while evading national responsibilities for the plight of the poor in deteriorating city centers. Unless the Congress and a new President respond vigorously to these basic urban necessities, the fiscal crises in New York and Philadelphia will unfold as only the opening scenes in a far deeper and broader national tragedy.

Watch on Intelligence ...

When the temporary Senate intelligence investigating committee goes out of business in two weeks after fifteen mooths of productive and responsible work under the chairmanship of Senator Church, it will be succeeded by a permaneot watchdog committee with real powers to oversee the disparate intelligence community-first such committee in the oation's history.

The effect of having a Select Committee on Intelligence -which comes at least twenty years after it was originally proposed—could be twofold: It could improve the functioning of the intelligence agencies themselves because of close seoatorial supervision, and end some of the worst practices of the past that infringed on the civil liberties of Americans.

A long train of abuses was revealed by the Church committee, including C.I.A. assassination plots, F.B.I. electronic espionage against promineot persons and organizations. National Security Agency invasions of private cable messages, and an Army spy program against political dissenters.

There will still be safeguards for national security information; but the permanent committee will have the essential authority to look into budgetary requests, including those for secret intelligence activities that have been hidden in several other budgets in the past, Existing military committees will continue to exercise review powers, but the basic reform of establishing an independent intelligence committee has finally been achieved. The national security-and the nation-should benefit.

Spying on Civilians

Through a distortion of the constitutional language that gives the Federal Government the power to "suppress insurrections," Army intelligence agents for at least ten years have been spyiog oo individuals and organizations in the United States and West Germany. This latest revelation by Senator Church's Select Committee on Intelligence Activities differa from kindred violations of civil liberties by the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation only because the intrusion by the military into domestic politics clashes so irreconcilably with American tradition.

Army surveillance of an estimated 100,000 individuals aod a large number of organizations begao during the civil rights protests and anti-Vietnam War demoostratioos. It included wiretappiog, opening of mail, penetration of churches and colleges; it even extended to harassment and disruption. The rights of peaceful assembly, petition and privacy were constantly violated by military officials sworn to uphold the Constitution. The Senate committee report indicates that mail openings and wiretapping continue against American individuals and organizations to this day.

These deplorable military intrusions into American life have long been suspected. Io 1970, Senator Ervin's Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights investigated military intelligence activities against domestic organizations. pointing out that the Army had oo right to do so even in the oame of quelling civilian disturbances.

As an immediate consequence of the Church committee's disclosures, the Defense Department should be called upon to report to Congress what it has done to eliminate these practices. This can be one of the first jobs for the Senate's new permanent committee to monitor intelligence agencies — including those under the Defense Department. No new legislation should be required: all that is needed is effective civilian supervision to prevent the military from ignoring the Constitution.

Carter's Nuclear Blast

Former Gov. Jimmy Carter's call a few days ago for a summit-level approach to the leaders of West Germany and France to halt the export of plutonium reprocessing plants, which produce atomic explosives, raised a campaign issue of major importance.

The Ford Administration's failure to come to grips with this problem early enough, vigorously enough or high enough in the councils of the Western world constitutes a serious threat to the nation's security and the future of mankind. There is oo iodication that the Administration is taking advantage of the visit of President Giscard d'Estaing of France to press seriously enough for a change in policy by Paris. Nor is Washington following Canada's example in permanently suspending nuclear cooperation with India, which diverted plutonium from a Canadian reactor to make an explosive device; on the contrary, the big guns of the Ford Administration are pressing for release of new shipments of enriched uranium fuel to India, despite strong opposition from Congress and environmental groups.

Plutonium has no commercial use at present. For three decades the United States and other nuclear supplier countries have refused to export the technology for plutonium reprocessing, uranium enrichment and other processes involved in making ouclear weapons. West Germany broke with this policy last June as part of a $4 billion sale of reactors to Brazil and is opening similar discussions with Iran. France is proceeding with the sale of a plutonium reprocessing plant to Pakistan.

If West Germany and France continue selling plutonium reprocessing plants, Mr. Carter pointed out, developing nations by the 1990's may be able to produce enough plutonium to build 3,000 Hiroshima-size bombs a year. The prospect that the normal events of historysuch as regional wars, revolutions, or terrorist attacksmay take on a nuclear dimension is frightful.

Mr. Carter has accurately diagnosed the immediate need for a moratorium on the export of plutonium reprocessing plants to provide time for international solutions. He argues that "all supplier countries are entitled to a fair share of the reactor market," meeting the West German argument that American dominance of this market has forced them to offer pilot plutonium plants-which American companies are forbidden to export-as "sweeteners." Plutonium reprocessing plants, which sell for a few million dollars, have no use now other than to make atomic bombs.

If the spréad of nuclear weapons technology is to be halted, nations must be assured an adequate supply of slightly enriched uranium fuel for peaceful power reactors. Such oeeds could be met through the proposal to enlarge production rapidly under multinational ownership. To meet the demand of the less-developed nations for progress in arms control by the ouclear powers, Mr. Carter urges a five-year ban oo all testing of nuclear devices and a more vigorous Soviet-American effort to limit strategic arms.

The voters will await more from Mr. Carter oo the issue of arms control. But this initial statement makes it clear that he is dealing seriously with a question of utmost importance to the nation's future.

To Improve the A.P.A.

Governor Carey's proposal for changes io the law governing the operatioos of the Adirondack Park Agency is not in itself a threat to that highly useful but hardpressed arm of the state. On the contrary, if the Governor's two bills are enacted substantially as he submitted them, they should make easier the task of the agency, which io fact belped to draft them. They might even undercut those members of the Legislature whose real purpose is to wreck the ageocy altogether. The risk lies only in the possibility that opening the law to improvements may also open It to emasculation unless the Governor is strong and clear on the matter.

A particularly coostructive provision advocated by Mr. Caray calls for the substitution, for the most part, of civil penalties for the criminal sanctions now in the law. These have proved too harsh for ready imposition, they provide emotional ammunition for the agency's critics and they have too often precluded the effective enforcement that civil penalties would assure. The revision would still permit criminal penalties against those who "deliberately and recklessly violate the law."

Even more important, the Governor's changes would introduce procedures for phased approval of land-use decisions by local government. These would in no way weaken the agency's essential control; but the flexibility would make it easier for local officials to enact and administer their own decisions and would to that extent reduce tensions between them and the agency.

An Assembly committee has reported out the bills with insubstantial changes. It remains for the Senate to do likewise and to keep the legislation from being tampered with on the floor. Should weakening ameodmeots be added—and there are legislators who are trying to do just that-Governor Carey will be bound in good conscience to veto the bill; the chance would then be lost for some sound and essential improvements in the law.

Scouts: Old and New

The Boy Scouts of America was chartered 66 years ago, dedicated to the development of physically, mentally and emotionally fit generations, self-reliant but devoted to helpiog others. Meeting this week in New York, delegates of the organization's more than 5.3 million members reaffirmed those goals. The Boy Scout ideal, and the preparation of its youthful adherents for national leadership, is as valid today as it was in a less sophisticated age. The aims are both old-fashiooed and up-to-date, in the best sense of both terms.

Mideast: An Inducement to Negotiation

To the Editor:

A short time ago Israel ceded oil fields and valuable military positions to Egypt. The tangible return was to be provided by the U.S. in material and political support. Both have been most grudgingly granted.

Israel also placed its faith in the intangibles of Kissinger's agreement: Egypt was to take the first hesitant steps toward peace, such as lessening anti-Israel propaganda, gradual dissociation from the Arab poycott and other actions aimed at creation of a respectable, moderate position in the Arah world which would distinguish-Egypt from Arab radicals. But Egypt has oow agreed to coordinate efforts with the P.L.O., to provide arms and money to this terrorist group and to permit resumption of P.L.O. broadcasts from Cairo.

The split between Egypt and Syria is part of a traditional rivalry in which Palestinians have cynically been used for narrow short-term advantages, and their "leaders" have encouraged this. The theme of this rivalry is: "We are more radical than you with regard to Israel." The spirit of the Israel-Egypt agreement has been violated.

Yet this and Sadat's stated unwillingness to "make peace in this generation" are perceived by many as moderate, and Israel's desire to make a full peace now is considered stubborn and extreme. Israel is being pressured to surrender the West Bank, Jerusalem and Gaza to the P.L.O. because Arafat has somehow managed to appear to be a moderate, too, even in the face of bombings which just in the past fortnight have killed and maimed dozens of Israeli civilians — the traditional target of Arafat's group. The establishment of a P.L.O. government in the territories would, in a single stroke,

Uranium's Rich 'Tails'

make Israel indefensible, and oo one in Israel has any doubt about what would follow that. lo the face of this reality, how can Israel signal that it will not acquiesce in its own destruction—that territory will be exchanged for peace, and not meckly surrendered, even in response to threats of annihilation or loss of vital outside support? With what can Israel threateo the Arabs to indicate that further delay in making peace is against the best interests of the Arabs? Israel must bold that land until the Arabs conclude a peace treaty. The settlements are the key to holding the land, and the threat of further settlements should be a strong inducement to negotiation.

Io a recent statement to the U.N. Security Council Mr. Malik reiterated that the Soviet Union wants "a radical political settlement . . . based on withdrawal of Israeli forces from territories occupied in the 1967 Aliddle East dispute."

Wouldn't it be a real convincing demonstration of Russia's peace-loving efforts if she would "radically withdraw" her Soviet forces from the (Baltic) border states she occupied

And wouldn't it be an even greater exhibition of Soviet credibility if she would withdraw her forces from the Middle East area altogethar, so that the world might oot suspect her of a (Baltic) repeat performance?

uranium reserves, it is instructive to note the enormous amount of energy cootained in uranium that has already been mined, refined, processed through uranium-enrichment plants and set aside as the depicted fraction ("tails") from the enrichment process. This depleted uranium, though not useful for present commercial reactors. is the basic fuel for future breeder reactors. The amount of such uranium already in storage in the United States, if used in breeders, is equivalent to about 450 billion tons of coal (700 times current U.S. annual production) or 1.5 trillion barrels of oil (500 times current U.S. annual production). The depleted uranium already in hand represents as much energy as the coal reserves of the United States or as much as the recoverable oil in the whole world. If all our present U.S. production of electricity were from breeders, this stock of depleted uranium could keep us going at the same rate for 500 years.

I am well aware that our planned ouclear program will require mining and refining of much more uranium for reactors of the present water-cooled variety, which use up only a tiny fraction of the energy in

Legal Celling-In of Foster Children

By Marcia R. Lowry

Foster care in New York State, which costs taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars a year, is a barbaric system in which adults, cloaking themselves in good intentions, commit injustices on children.

One of the most recent of these has been the court-ordered return of four sisters, Cheryl, Patricia, Cynthia and Cathleen Wallace, to a mother who placed them in foster care almost six years ago because of her own inability to care for them.

The girls, 13, 12, 10 and 9 years old, begged to remain with their foster parents, George and Dorothy Lhotan, and expressed deep aversion to their oatural mother, who had seriously oeglected them while they were with her and rarely visited them as they were growing up in foster care. However, on April 9, their final legal appeal was denied, and they were removed from the Lhotan bome.

According to the generally accepted theory of foster care, children leave their parents' custody only when it is absolutely oecessary and then only for a brief time. If there is no prospect of a quick reunion, or if the parent fails to remain involved in the child's life, the state acts quickly to seek a new, permanent home for the child so that foster care can remain. a temporary arrangement. Foster parents must provide love while at the same time maintaining the distance eppropriate for temporary custodians.

The facts differ sharply from the theory. Few children in foster care return to their natural families withm e short period of time. Only 20 percent of the 49,000 New York children in foster care leave within the year; 39 percent remain for more than five years. The everage stay is increasing, up to 3.6 years io 1973.

About 70 percent of the children in foster care live in individual foster homes where they usually become a part of the family, particularly as time passes. The Wallace children became more a part of the Lhotan family as their contacts with their oatural mother dwindled. This lack of contact is common for children in foster care,

The egency responsible for the children, the Nassau County Children's Bureau, had assured Patricia Wallace's daughters that there were no plans to return them to their oatural mother. However, under pressure from her, the agency finally decided it had to act. When the Ihotans expressed alarm at the plan, the Children's Bureau decided that they were uncooperative, and therefore unsuitable, foster parents.

Patricia Wallace, knowing her legal rights went to court. The Children's Bureau, knowing the theory of foster care, supported her.

Thus, the battle began, the children pleading throughout that their oat- New York State that children belong ural mother was a stranger to to the people who gave birth to them, that they had new parents, them, no matter what the children

A Politics of Decimation

By Tom Wicker

My Favorite Unannounced Presidential Candidate put in a couple of sleepless nights this week, after Gerald Ford's comeback io Michigan and Jimmy Carter's comeuppance in Mary-

"Looks like the race is still open." a sepulchral voice kept whispering in My Favorite Caodidate's ear, as the night bours clicked by. "Maybe you ought to get in after all . . . maybe these clowns are going to give it away . . . maybe you could win it

But as may be hoped will be the case with others sorely tempted, good sense reasserted itself, and My Favorite Candidete finally got e good night's sleep. The same modesty and realism that had kept him out of the race last winter had kept him out egain-he knew he couldn't win, even If he did believe he was the best man for the job.

That is, of course, more than most candidates know and what they all believe. But My Favorite also theorized in his nights of soul-searching that what primarily eccounts for the ups and downs of this campaign is what he calls, with slight mathematical license, the Politics of Decimation.

In this thesis, the governing fact of 1976 is thet all the natural leaders of both parties-defined es those with personal constituencies on a netionel scale-have been removed from the scene by unnatural events. Not only are they not competing personally but oone of them could leave their constituencies to recognized heirs. -

Thus, on the Democratic side, since 1963, John and Robert Kennedy have been lost by essassinetion, and their heir, Edward Keonedy, to the events at and following the cookout at Chappaquiddick in 1969. George Wallece, who bad a constituency of a different order, lost it to some extent through changing political circumstances but primarily to the bullets thet put him in a wheelchair. It is ell too easily forgotten, moreover, thet in a more oormal course of events Lyndoo B. Johosoo pmbably would have been re-elected to 1968. Mr. Johnson was removed from the scene politically, rether than by bullets or scandel, but owing mostly to the wer io Vietnam and the peece movement that war evoked-which were anything but netural developments.

On the Republican side, Richard Nixon, who domineted the party for so long-appearing on its national ticket in five of the last six Presidential elections—was finally removed from the picture by Wetergate and the likelihood of impeachment and removal. Even before that happened, a Republican who had developed another national constituency, Spiro T. Agnew, pled no contest to e taxevasion felony and resigned from the Vice Presidency.

The man to whom Mr. Nixon-or Lyodon Johnson, for that mattermight heve bequeethed his constituency, or who might have contested with Mr. Agnew for his-Joho Connally of Texas-was thrown far off stride by a neo-Watergate indictment. Though he subsequently won ecquittal, the damage was done end e reletive nobody in terms of constituency, Gerald Ford, succeeded Mr. Nixon.

As My Favorite Unannounced Candidete sums it up, the nation has hed eight national leaders, of both major parties end encompassing the political spectrum, several of whom would surely be active in politics today, put out of action unnaturelly in the last decade, In that light, whn could expect a conventional election contested by well-known leaders of recognized national constituencies? There's hardly any such animal left.

The nearest thing to it may be Roneld Reagan, heir to the constituency of Berry Goldwater (even if Mr. Goldwater is supporting Gerald Ford) and pretender to that of George Wellace. Mo Udell has consistently won whet Scoop Jeckson called "the wine and cheese vote" but he appears to be less the natural liberal leader than whet he termed himself-their "only horse to ride."

Hubert Humphrey? He has a constituency, ell right, which is why he's a real caodidate whatever he says, and why Mr. Jackson wasn't. Nelson Rockefeller has a constituency, too, but in both cases the battle scars are prominent, end the constituency is not wellsuited to the circumstances of 1976.

As for Jimmy Carter, My Favorite Unannounced Candidate thinks he's succeeded because he's come closer to building a national constituency than any other Democrat; but that he hesn't locked up the nomination because his constituency doesn't fit the eccepted perty cetegories, any more than Mr. Certer himself. That's why his real rival is Mr. Humphrey, who does.

On the First Amendment

By Kevin Phillips

BETHESDA, Md.—The free-speech and free press provisions of the First Amendment are getting quite a workout these days. Lawyers have been citing them on behalf of everything from bottomless dancing to freeing Federal election campaign subsidies.

This is risky business. Catch-all citation of the First Amendment has become a glib communications-industry technique, but legal history suggests that greater moderation is in order. What irony thet self-interested newsmedie types are wrapping the presentday First Amendment in the same exaggerated aura of Jefferson and Madison that early 20th-century business spokesmen used to support their fading but then loog-established claims of "due-process" protectioo against routine state economic regulation

. Unlike leopards, the law is always changing its spots: It follows the evolution of economic and political power. Thus, Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison et al., would be absolutely stunned at many presentday judicial interpretations of free

Let me quote Prof. Benno Schmidt of Columbia Law School: "The First Amendment judicial tradition [is] eotirely a product of the twentieth century, since no case raising First Amendment issues came to the Supreme Court before 1900," Or the late Alexander Bickel: "Its legal career in court decisions is a matter, essentially . . . of the past half century."

And it has been a very expansive balf century indeed. John Peter Zenger's brand of backroom political pamphleteering has been joined, under the umbrella of the First Amendment, by nude ballets, publication of stolen Government top-secret documents, identification of Central Intelligence Agency agents (who can then be killed), naming in print of rape victims, cinema performances à la Linda Lovelace and Snuff, and lurid prejudicial pretrial coverage of defendants.

You may be agreeing that these excesses are a problem hot that we must safeguard "the public's right to know." Here media lawyers will privately tell you that there is oo "public's right to know." If there were, it would create a cooverse set of media legal obligations to print. At is bappens, the First Amendment doesn't do much for media consumers: It mostly protects communicators—the media industry-which is typical of how Amer-

Fifty to 100 years ago, benign law imposed minimal regulation on emerging concentrations in manufacturing and commerce. Now a new power center is emerging. Over the last fifty years, as the percentage of the United States gross national product accounted for by the production, coosumption and dissemination of knowledge bas risen from 12 percent or so to 35 percent to 40 percent, American jurisprudence has succored the communications industry. Legal scholars freely describe it as the last stronghold of laissez-faire. .

Today's buge communications industry is e "oew frontier" of economic power that must slowly and carefully be subjected to deconcentration, access and other legal epplications of the public interest just as railroads, trusts, utilities and banks were in

To date, though, the major media bave rarely been willing to allow candid discussion and analysis of this problem. That may be understandable in terms of immediate self-interest, but it could be self-defeating in the long term. If legal theory isn't updated slowly and carefully, it could be updated with a bang and bludgeon.

· Bear in mind that in no other Western country does the press enjoy the freedom from Government regulation that it does bere. Even Britain, seat of our Anglo-Saxon legal beritage, has Government-controlled television and a tough Official Secrets Act. The unique United States legal situation less reflects the public interest than the economic and political clout of our communications/knowledge industry. This power is unmatched elsewhere in the world because the United States is in the vanguard of the postindustrial revolution. Economic and legal aspects of the knowledge industry will become progressively more important.

And so will serious discussion of the balance between privilege and-responsibility. Media spokesmen who falsely wrap present-day legal interpretations in the mantle of the Founding Fathers and use the First Amendment as a thoughtless slogan to backstop their every vocational ambition are, in the end, doing nobody a favor. They are distorting and trivializing an increasingly vital national debate.

Race for a Swine Flu Vaccine Began In a Manhattan Lab

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK Jr.

The race for a new flu vaccine began in February with a telephone call on Friday the 13th.

It was Dr. Martin Goldfield of the New Jersey State Health Department calling Dr. Edwin Kilbourne of Mt. Sinai Medical Center in Manhattan. The message four samples of flu virus were on their way to New York.

They were unusual; nohing at all like the virus called.

A/Victoria that was the main cause of flu that season.

It meant that another virus against which most Americans had no immunity was abroad in the population and might be gaining momentum for nationwide epidemics. Clearly, Dr. Kilbourne, chairman of the microbiology department of the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, would want to grow the new virus in his laboratory as soon as possible. He had done this with every major flu variant that had appeared in the United States during the past decade. Each time, he had tried to remodel the virus for rapid growth, making it more useful for vaccina production. It was a strategy for putting the human race one step ahead of the ever-changing flu viruses. At least four of Dr. Kilbourne's remodeled viruses—called recombinants— have been used in vaccines since 1968.

When the telephne conversation took place in mid-

DeWitt Clinton 'Newsers' Honor Former Adviser

Legend, like a jaunty halo, vas shaped Wednesday night around a feisty 78-year-old man who, from 1928 to 1955, is faculty adviser to the newspaper of DeWitt Clinton High School, chastised, with "a ruthless blue pencil," the writings of such protégés as James Baldwin, the novelist and essayist; Paddy Chayefsky, the playwright, and Maurice H. Another remembered turning in a piece that Phipsy thought was so stcreotyped that he scribbled on lt: "Where the hell did you

And all remembered the yellow slips: "Check the facts."

'No, No, No'

At one point, Mr. Philipson, s thin, sprightly man who still jogs a mile and walks five miles a day, peered out over his glasses and cau-tioned his former "newsers" to avoid excess adulation. You would have made it anyhow You had the goods. His comment touched off a loud pro'es' of "No. no, no." From the memories emerged a profile of happier years in the Bronx, when neighborhoods were safe and youngsters in torn sweaters, carrying their lunches in brown-paper bags, looked at the future with optimism as they rode Bronx subways to their school at Mosholu Park-

'Tonight I thought I ought to be formal, so I wore a jacket and tie and real shoes," Mr. Philipson told them, almost sheepishly.

His sports jacket was wrinkled and did not match his poorly knotted tie, sports shirt or slacks.

The position illustrates a problem that has been conspicuous in Mr. Carter's Presidential campaign: the question of his credibility and whether he is evasive oo issues. [A1:6-7.]

Jimmy Carter's prospects of winning the Democratic Presidential nomination have been enhanced by a little-noticed series of endorsements from key Democratic officials in larger states. The endorsements appear to assure Mr. Carter of about 125 additional delegates and he stands to gain 25 more in other states where convention delegates are being selected. It is estimated that 712 delegates have previously been committed to Mr. Carter. The increased support be seems to be guaranteed would give him 1,085 delegates, without counting the New Jersey and Ohio primaries on June 8. [A1:7.] Metropolitan

Governor Carey said that the state would not increase its aid to the City University for the coming year, thus tuition would be the only means by which the university could raise the money to continue operating at its present level. Mr. Carey proposed an advance of $24 million against state aid due later in the year as a way of closing the university's budget gap in the remaining six weeks of its fiscal year. [Al:1.] A $4-million-a-year tax-abatement plan as an incentive to the rebuilding of the Commodore Hotel into a $100-million luxury hotel operated by the Hyatt chain was approved by the New York City Board of Estimate. [A1:2-3.]

Victor Gotbaum, chairman of the Municipal Labor Committee, said that the municipal labor unions could live within the rules of the tough wage policy set by the Emergency Financial Control Board, which require that any increase in pay be financed by productivity. But he warned that the unions, whose contracts with the city expire June 30, would not allow conditions to be imposed on them. He accused the board of, io effect, issuing guidelines by fiat. Back Home to Peoria—and a Sequel to Feminine Mystique

Special to The New York Time PEORIA, Ill.—Betty Goldstein, a young girl who thought so fast that she tripped over her words, and who had to be given a nonspeaking role in her high school play, left Peoria more than three decades ago. The name on her book jacket was Betty Friedan, and the hook was called "The Feminine Mystique."

Peoria wasn't ready for it. "I waso't very happy with her in those years," her brother recalled. "She was a cross I had to bear. I was a young shining light and I had to liva her down."

Betty Friedan returned ooce more to her hometown last weekend. It was her first visit for more than a few hours, since the publication of the book that changed millions of lives, and catapaulted her into inter-national prominence.

Cheers and Signs

She was greeted at the airport hy a hevy of womeo carrying hand-painted signs. The signs bobbed up and down, with the cheers, but tha lettering was clear for all to read:

"Peorla-Home of Betty Friedan." "It's a conservative small city but it comprises the essence of the best in America, and some of the worst," Mrs. Friedan said. "Looking hack. the don't buy a lot of cliches about middle America. I grew up in middle America."

"Life moves on, and what was not accepted yesterday is accepted to-day," said Harry Goldstein, a respected husinessman and civic activist who considers himself much more conservative than his sister. Mr. Goldstein, the head of a large furni-ture concern, has lived here all his life, other than his college and war

"Maybe Betty hasn't changed but society has moved on," he said at a small gathering in his sister's hooor. "People aren't laughing anymore, or criticizing."

Betty Friedan returned to her hometown of Peoria to speak on behalf of the equal rights amendment and to visit old friends. Left, Mrs. Friedan, Robert McCord, John Parkhurst, Vicki McCord, standing, and Harriet Parkhurst. Right, at a gathering in her brother's home with her sister-in-law, Inette, and her brother, Harry Goldstein.

Edie Stubbs was one of the hundreds of men and women who crowded into a dinner given by the League of Women Voters, and a buffet party given by Illicois supporters of the equal rights amendment, to hear Mrs. Friedan speak.

Meeting Betty is like coming to Mecca," she said. "She changed my life." added Mrs. Stubbs, a teacher and vice president of the Peoria Education Association.

"I was a hysterical type, of suburban housewife, embroidering tablecloth kits, peeling wallpaper, making hread and locked up with a hahy, when I read her book. Now I work full-time, moonlight as a wife, mother and homemaker, and my hushand is ny greatest supporter.

Now, on the eve of publication of her second book, "It Changed My Life" ($10, Random House), next month, Betty Friedan is changing direction. She is not saving goodbye she says in her book.

Mrs. Friedan, who has disagreed openly with the present leadership of the National Organization for Women, an organization she was in-strumental in founding, is "not san-guine" about its future. She has, however, no doubts about the future of the women's movement as a whole.

"It is a mistake to see the move-ment in narrow terms," she said. "If NOW does not continue to express the real needs of women from all segments of American life, and mova positively and affirmatively to meet the needs of womeo at home and in jobs, it will cease to become a force for change . . . but something else will take its place.

The strength of the movement is decentralization," she cootinued. "A single organization can be co-opted. destroyed, paralyzed . . . but there is a lot of nealthy activity in the field. The woman's movement is irreversible . . . it is built into our society . . . it cannot be destroyed." She noted that a Harris poll cooducted within the last six mooths re-ported that 65 percent of all women endorsed most efforts to strengthen and change women's status in society, hut that only 17 percent felt that most organizations trying to get the changes were helping the cause of women. Stuttering: Modern Approaches to an Ancient Afflic

By RICHARD FLASTE

The 24-year-old mechanic inhaled, then exhaled, then prolonging the first syllable io the sentence—he fluently recalled the first time he started to worry about his

He was 4 years old, alone in a room, feeling ashamed, and he esked himself why he "different from everybody else." As the ensuing years of speech therapy attest, he remained different. If anything, the affliction their child stutteriog at 3 or 4, a common age for it to 4, a common age for it to start, are often advised not to worry about it. Chadren stutter naturally, and they usually outgrow it, the parents are told.

That advice is accurate enough. Most children do outgrow their stuttering But outgrow their stuttering. But many others carry the afflic-tion into adulthood. There are said to be as many as two million adult stutterers in the may grow up hating them-selves for being so inade-quate and "different," fearing social situations, fearing the telephone, fearing words that they have had difficulty with hefore. When a sensi tive word is called for, they may avoid stuttering by using another instead, even if it's incorrect. (One speech specialist theorizes that that's how Casey Stengel learned "Stengelese".)

The cure rate for this disorder has out been espe-cially good, despite centuries of dealing with it. From De-mosthenes to Virgil to Winston Churchill, stuttering has been an enigma wrapped in anxiety.

In recent years, however, there has been a proliferation of attempts to get at the cause and the cure.

Dr. David Burns, a psychiatrist at the University of Pennsylvania, in Philadel-phia, said that, if anything, "it's e problem of having too many approaches." But a number of them have promise, he said, and "this is e particularly good time to be a stutterer in therapy." At the school, Dr. Burns and his colleagues treat stut-tening as both an emotional and a physiological problem. They place a tiny metronome behind the stutterer's ear to help him pace his words, they offer him psychotherapy and, io some cases, what Dr.

Burns described as new "antistuttering drugs." Benefits Increasing. Dr. Burns said that 90 perceot of the stutterers who go through with the therapy are belped at least io some degree. Just a couple of years ago the figure given by ther-apy centers was 75 percent. A speech specialist at the New York University Medical Center, Martin F. Schwartz, has published a hook called "Stuttering Solved" (Lippiocott, $7.95), and on its cover it describes Dr. Schwartz's approach as "A revolutionary new treatment with an 89 percent success rate for both children and adult stutter-

Dr. Schwartz had been evoking admiration—and some antagonism—before the hook, however. He is criticized not because his critics are certain that he is wrong but because they find his re-search less than complete, his conclusions simplistic and his presentation, in which he seems to depict his work as the only relevant research, abrasive.

None of that appears to faze Dr. Schwartz, an affahle man who nevertheless can be patently egoceptric (11 of the hook's 48 chapters begin with the word 'T').

Dr. Schwartz asserts that stuttering is an essentially physical problem in which, because of an inappropriate reflex, the child's vocal cords spring open before speech in-stead of remaining loosely together. Some children together. Some children pause and the cords relax. Others force the cords shut, "lockiog ' ta.m. m king it all the harder to talk. They speech game" that parents then struggle against the can play with youngsters. He locked cords—and that is tells parents who have read stuttering.

The stuttering, which begins merely in response to the child's desire to speak quickly rather than pause, cao sooo iovolve "anticipatory stress"—a fear of what will happen when you try to speak. And that stress can keep someone stuttering years after the reflex that started it has been outgrowo. Because of the stuttering, other problems develop. To say that the other problems —difficulty in dealing with people, for instance—caused the stuttering is, in Dr. Schwartz'a word, a "myth." Yet thet traditional psycho-logical viewpoint is the one held by Dr. oJseph G. Sheehan, an author, therapist and professor of psychiatry at the University of California et

Los Angeles.
"Stuttering," Dr. Sheehan contends, "is a conflict between expressing yourself and holding back." The child "is unsure of his ability to express himself; he has to speak upward to adults, he may be under pressure to achiava and there are too many demands and not enough support."

'Stresses Psychotherapy'

Despite emphasizing a psy-chological cause, Dr. Sheehao describes stuttering as "probably e disorder into which there are many pathways" and he is skeptical about what he sees as Dr. Schwartz's easy solution.

Dr. Sheehan's approach puts a lot of weight on psy-chotherapy with tha child and pareots. He says that the parents of a stutterer ought to look at the stresses in the family. "Stuttering is a symptom that something has gone wrong," he said.

Dr. Schwartz's therapy, at the other extreme, consists of inhaling and exhaling before each aentence (that mechanic was one of Dr. Schwartz's patients). The breathing is meant to keep the curds unlocked. The first syllable is hegun slowly to avoid tha "speed stress."

For children who stutter seriously wheo they try to speak the quickly, Dr. Schwartz has a "stretch-

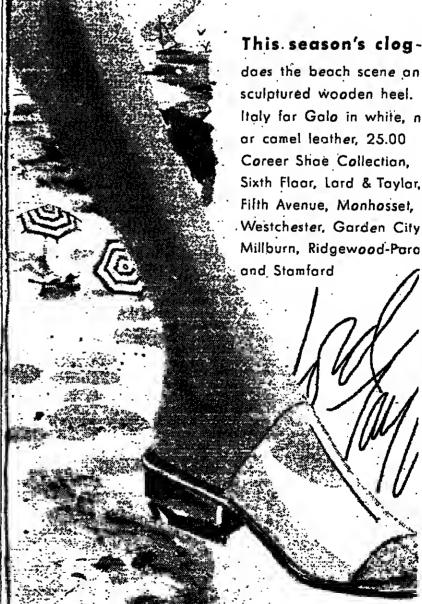

his hook to practice slow speech and theo demoostrate

it to their children. There's more to it, but the idea is that the child has been trying to speak as rapidly as the parents. Now he should try to speak as slow-ly. In the process, he enters each sentence more gradual-ly and the stress is reduced, the cords relaxed.

Evidently, however, the exercise itself can make pareots less than relaxed. They become anxious over whether they are speaking course in revers

'Gag' on Hurricane Carter Remains

The Passaic County (N.J.) District Court judge in the retrial of Rubin (Hurricane) Carter and John Artis for a triple murder refused to allow them to discuss publicly the issues io their upcoming trial. The judge, Bruno L. Leopizzi, said in Paterson that the request for removal of a gag order would make it "impossible to impanel an impartial jury.

Before releasing bls opinion, Judge Leopizzi announced that the trial date would be changed from Oct. S to Sept. 27 because the new date was when a new jury panel would report for duty. He also said he would disqualify himself if the lawyers in the case so requested.

It is the cooperation of the tenants, the bank and H.U.D. that is making the "work-out" possible. And Conversion Planners is hoping to manage the same in at least one other Federally insured project, Fox Hills on Staten Island. At Fox Hills there are 360 modern apartments in three double-winged buildings in the Stapleton section.

In recent months there have been a number of evictions for nonpayment of rents, and Conversion Planners is trying to negotiate a sale of the project from H.U.D. to a community group, the Staten Island Community Corporation, in advance of the cooperative offering.

beled eggs in a warm, dimly lit room in Mt. Sinai's An-neoberg Building 16 floors above Central Park.

"This is really animal husbandry in a sense," Dr. Kilbourne explained to a recent visitor.

Each sample of the new virus was in eggs together with another flu virus called PR-8, known for its excellent growth characteristics. PR-8, a museum piece amoog human flu viruses, came originally from samples collected in the early 1930's. Its genes have been mapped and all its characteristics are thoroughly known.

Flu viruses have the helptendency to exchange bits of their hereditary information — their genes — when two different strains grow together in the same place. The research strategy was to invite the new virus from New Jersey to pick up fast growing habits of PR-8 while still retaining its own recognizable -identity.

Viruses in Same Egg

So samples of the new virus and the old were put-together in the same egg with a serum designed to keep PR-8 from multiplying. Dr. Kilbourne and his laboratory technician would be looking for viruses that had picked up the talent for fast growth from PR-8 without having lost the traits that identified them as the swine influeoza type.

At 20 hours 40 hours, 60 hours, Miss Pokorny harvested the fluid from the eggs, tested it to see how much virus was present and what kind of virus it was. Then she put samples from this new testing into new eggs for a further period of growth. It was like a relay race in which each virus generation passed on the baton to the next generation to see which sample was wining the cootest in fecundity. The complex routine of "animal husbandry" was repeated time after time —harvesting, analyzing, separating, diluting and grow-ing again. Each step, and the history of each egg, was carefully recorded. Laboratory Secret

The work went on without a break, in isolation and almost in secret. Dr. Kilbourne had told no one but Miss Pokorny what the new viruses were. Laboratory safety measures were extraordinary even for flu virus. He wanted oo risk of infecting anyone.

"I wouldn't let anybody in the laboratory," Miss Po-korny recalled. "They really thought I had flipped out." As the work progressed. samples that seemed to be growing best were subdivided diluting their fluid, sometimes more than a million-fold. The objective was to focus the search down to individual virus particles and to choose those that generated the most offspring It was an exercise Dr. Kilbourne and his assistant had been through many times before. But this time it was tense because it was also a tight race against an unknown competitor—the orig-inal swine influenza-type virus that been found in New

FOR 45 MINUTES

By DAMON STETSON

The Newspaper Guild went on strike for 45 minutes at The New York Post last night and then suddenly ended the walkout to continue negotiations.

Harry Fisdell, executive vice president of the guild, emerged from bargainiog talks at Auto-mation House, 49 East 68th Street, at 6 P.M. and said, "The strike is on."

Within minutes pickets were marching in front of The Post's plant at 210 South Street, but there was little immediate impact since the newspaper's last editions for Thursday had al-ready reached the streets and most guild members-news, circulation and business employees had left for the day.

Mezowhile, Dorothy Schiff, publisher of The Post, who was at Automatioo House—but not sitting at the bargaining table appeared and warned the guild oegotiators that a strike might hurt the paper permaneatly. For a few minutes there was confusion, although the guild oegotiators had voted ear-lier to continue oegotiations even though the strike was in progress.

At 6:45 P.M. Mr. Fisdell said that the pickets were being withdrawn and that they would not return until 11 P.M., pending the outcome of further

An evening shift of compos-iog room employees had gone to work at The Post before the picket lines were established Most of the members of other crafts do not report for work until early morning except for a midnight shift of printers. Leaders of the crafts had pledged support for the guild in the event of a strike.

Mr. Fisdell put the blame for the 6 P.M. strike oo the refusal of The Post to withdraw demands for retrogressions and to meet the package agreed upon carlier by three other unions at the newspaper. There was no immediate comment from The

The failure of the oegotiashort-lived strike by the 410 guild members at The Post would shut down the city's only afternoon daily, which has a circulation of about 500,000.

The old guild contract had a termination date of March 31, 1975, but members of the union had continued to work while had contioued to work while negotiations continued on a periodic basis. Meanwhile, the guild, as did a number of other newspaper unions, settled with The New York Times and The Dally News on three-year con-tracts providing general in-creases on a pattern equal to $25 a week the first year, $20 the second and $20 the third.

Three newspaper unions, the Mailers, Drivers and Stereohave reached agreements with The Post providing the first and second years along with cost-savings in the second year. In the third year, the publisher has the right to reopen the wage issue for further negotiation. Under the old contract, pay scales, according to the guild. ranged from a starting rate of $131.60 a week for coov-runners and messengers to $379.80 a week for reporters, photo-graphers, and advertising sales-men, and to $394.80 a week for

"There is virtually no chance that any civilization we contact in space will be as backward as we."

Carl Sagan thinks it highly improbable that life originated only on Earth. And, that being the case, it is highly probable that other forms of life, elsewhere and older, are more advanced

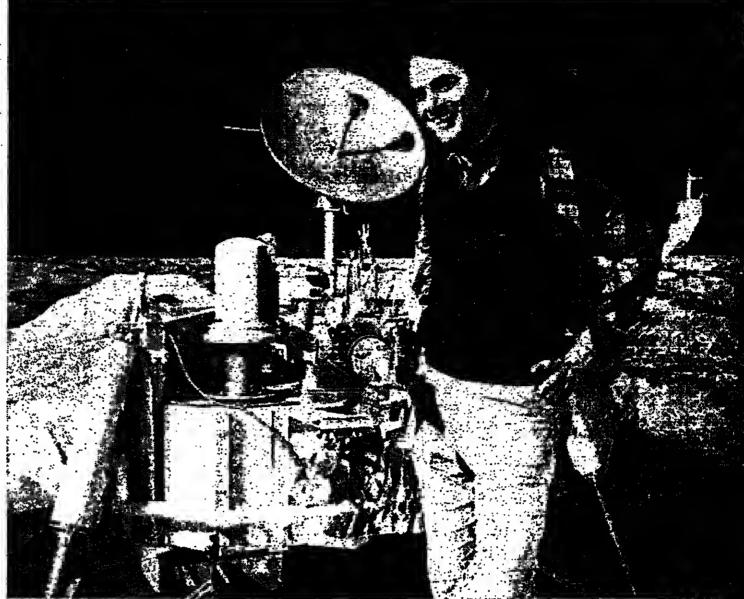

"We have developed radio astronomy only recently. Anyone significantly dumber than we can't communicate over interstellar distances at all. So any civilization which does make contact with us is bound to be more advanced. It's a humbling realization."

Sagan's interest in the planets and exobiology goes back to his childhood. In adult life he has expressed this interest through many contributions to our understanding of the solar system, to spacecraft missions to the planets, and to listening for radio signals from space.

"In all the history of mankind this will be regarded as the golden age of planetary exploration."

At 41, he is Professor of Astronomy and Space Sciences at Cornell and Director of its Laboratory for Planetary Studies. Educated at the University of Chicago (A.B., B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. in Astronomy and Astrophysics), he has authored or co-authored more than a dozen books, almost 400 scientific papers, two SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN articles, and edits Icarus: International Journal of Solar System Studies. He received the NASA Medal for Exceptional Scientific Achievement for his studies of Mars be there" Carl and his wife. Linda Salzman. collaborated on the design of the plaque attached to the Pioneer 10 spacecraft, the first conscious message of mankind to other civilizations in space.

Carl credits SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN with helping to shape his interests. "I lived in a small town in New Jersey and didn't have anyone to talk to about science. In high school I couldn't tell from books what was obsolete from what was valid; or what the latest findings were. SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN told me."

In a society that lives by innovation, discovery is our most important product. SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is the magazine of discovery, attracting a growing number of newsstand buyers and subscribers. kiods of oysters on the half shell, a phal-anx of quiches, can-nelloni caressed by a special sauce supreme from the Piedmont, follow it with sizzling steak filets, then surrender to the gazpacho of Andalusia, the sausages of Braun-schweig, or pheasant pate. Wash it down with frozen banana daiquiries or cold German beer to clear your palate for apple walnut or pecan pie with a dollop of ice cream. Then, watch clowns, puppets, minstrels, magicians, singers and jesters and what do you have?

You have an idea of what is going to happeo along Ceotral Park's Literary Walk starting at 11 A.M. tomorrow and contioning until 6 P.M. or until either the food or the Alka-Seltzer runs out.

In a panoply fit for Henry VIII or any other Henry you may care to mention, an estimated 100,000 people from New York and everyplace else are expected to throng Literary Walk for "A Taste of the Big Apple," which has been arranged by more than 70 of the city's restaurants and their suppliers, who say they want to "create an enormous public event in the city of New York that every-one can enjoy." If it rains, the event will be held Sunday; its promoters seem con-fident that it wouldn't dare the preparations that have been made. In olden days when the only fiscal problems most New Yorkers had was finding a good five-cent cigar, the city called itself a "Summer Festival," In the springtime of 1976, with New York City

In the vanguard of urban impecuniosity, the restaurant people seem determined to prove that although the city may have a hole in its pocket. its palate and vitality remain very much intact. Tomorrow's bash, which was organized by a fairly recently formed group called the Hospitality Industry Foundation of New York, may appear in be ni gluiton-ous proportions. The restau-rants backing it, however, have tailored it to people with hedonism in their dreams but parsimony in their reality.

Five dollars will buy you a book of 20 tickets — or "apples" as the restaurant people call them - which should be more than enough to enable anyone to sample widely if not wildly. The restaurants represented, which include Maxwell's Plum. Sweet's, Gage & Tollner, Fraunces Tavern, "21" Club and Sardi's-will be selient their wares at reduced rates, And for those who like to spent their weekends as they spend their weekdays. Nathan's Famous, Nedick's and

Zum Zum will be there, too. "Our idea was to make ear food available to everyour," said Robert Norden, proprietor of Fraunces Tayern, "especially to those who might ordinardy feel they couldn't afterd us,"

Thus, Mr. Norden will offer Florida-grown corn on the enb for 25 cents an ear and when last heard trees was trying to decide whether each ear would be brushed with butter or drenched in it.

Fifty cents will buy one of incem Sardi's caimelions, which will be served with a sauce supreme especially prepared by Mr. Sardi's chef. Se-

Anything Goes at the Galleries

By JOHN RUSSELL

HAT Philip John-son said not long ago of architec-ture is equally the death of the idee fixe," he said, "There are no rules, only facts. There is oo order, only preferences."

Given a token or two and a stout pair of oxfords, you can test that out this weekend in exhibitions all the way from the World Trade Center on the southerly edge of Manhattan to the Studio Museum io Harlem, which stands on Fifth Avenue at 125th Street. What you will some call 'pluralism," others

"the open situation" and a third group "coexistence." You will not find a dominant trend. You will not find long lines outside one kind of show and a yawning staff at the door of another. Visitors end up with what they like, all over town, and none of them feel pressured by the competition. That could mean anything from fragile "vintage photo-graphs" (prints made at the time the picture was taken) to a tapestry by Joan Miró that is so heavy it could briog an elephant to its knees. It could mean classic paintings of the 1930's and 40's, it could mean the handcrafted wooden typewriter by Fumio Yoshimura (Nancy Hoffman Gallery, 429 West Broadway, through June 2) that will never help you with your mail but is a seductive object nonetheless. It could mean the colossal painled closeups of a smoker inhaling that scare the hide off us at Tom Wesselmann's exhibition (at the Sidney Janis Gal-lery, 6 West 57th Street, through May 28). It could mean anything at all that is good of its kind.

For in New York, as it is today, there is room for everyone, and there is a public for everyone.

Summer Turning Into Hottest New Season Of Theater Year

ULY and August were once dreary months on Broadway, but in the last seven or eight years there has been a kind of resurgence, and now this summer may be the biggest summer of all. There is even a possibility that, come fall, there may be more shows around than there will be theaters to put them in, and this means there could be e booking jam. This is not a certainty yet, of course, although the prospect of a big summer very nearly is. "The summer," says Bernard Jscobs of the Shubert Organization, "will be very, very big."

Fnr nne thing, "Godspell," which has done almost everything that a musical can do except play Broadway, will nnw do that, too. On June 22, after 2,100 performances Off Broadway since 1971, it will move into the Broadhurst Theater. The producers of "Godspell"—Edgar Lansbury, Stuart Duncan and Joseph Beruh — had con-sidered a mova before, but far various reasons bad declined it. Then they took a survey. They asked 500 people who were standing in line for Broadway shows if they had seen "Godspell." Half said they bad not, but balf of that half said they would if it were to move to Broadway. Cnosequently, "Godspell" will move.

Meanwhile, "Tuscaloosa's Calling Me," which has also been Off Broadway, will go into the Golden on July 12. At approximately the same time, "Jesus Christ, Superstar" will return to Broadway—after having had generally dismal reviews there ooce before—only this time with its Loodoo production. The London productioo is supposed to be better than the ooe that played in New York.

The all-black "Guys and Dolls," which was supposed to arrive here next fall, may also come io this summer. It is now playing at the National Theater in Washington, where its gross climbed from $61,000 its first week to $110,000 its third, and by tha time it arrives in the city it will probably bave a new director. He will be Cy Feuer, who, in 1950, was the co-producer of "Guys and Dolls,"

"I Have a Dream," with Billy Dee Williams as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., probably will come to Broadway as well. It opened at Fnrd's Theater in Washington tn generally fair reviews and then moved to Atlanta, where the reviews were not so good. Then it went to Chicago, and now it is in Philadelphia. There is no date for a Broadway opening yet, but if it does move that would most likely be in July.

The other news about an opening concerns 'Fiddler on the Roof." It is now in rehearsal for what is supposed to be a six-mooth "farewell" tour with Zero Mostel. It opens in Los Angeles next munth, and now it looks as if it will one day open again oo Broadway, too.

Tully Houselights Dim for 'Mostly Ushers'

By RAYMOND ERICSON

The ushers at Alice Tully Hall, who have to listen to concerts night after night, sometimes feel that they have as moch right to be onstage as the performers they hear. Now nine of them will have that chance. They will give a free chamber-music concert in the hall at Lincoln

Center at 2 P.M. tomorrow. The event is called a "Mostly Ushers Concert"—a referenca to Lincoln Ceoter'a famous annual "Mostly Moz-art Festival"-because a few of the people iovolved serve the additorium in nther

Deborah Fanning, a 2I-year-old soprano who sings in choruses and likes to do or choruses and likes to do vocal chamber music, doesn't who aren't singers but still try to sing." She feels like telling them, "Move over—I want to be oo this stage."

Marcia Eckert, a 24-year-old pianist, says: "There are times when I know I should be playing instead of listen-ing. When I see pianists my own age up there on the, stage, I want to be there, too."

- "At Memphis State University," says Daniel Robert Neal, a 24-year-old cellist, "I got spoiled because I made enough money just playing. Here the grating thing is when you know people who are in the pick-up orchestra onstage and you're not with them." The rest of the performers are genuine ushers, some full-tima, some steady substitutes. They are modest and intelligent about their abilitles, in no way resembling the stereotype movie asher who dreams of being a star like the one up there on the screen. But as trained performers they can't help feeling frustrated at times during certain coocerts they

Jazz Three Ways

Any member of the jazz trio of Kenny Barron, pianist; Ted Dunbar, guitarist, and Ron Carter, bass player, which opened Wednesday evening at Sweet Basil, at 88 Seventh Avenue, might have been the leader of the group—and, io fact, each one has been at one time or another. This week, however, the head man is Mr. Dunbar, and he is earning his stripes by giving the trio its most positive and personal quality. Mr. Dunbar's style has its ronts in the long, light, loop-ing lines of the seminal elec-tric guitarist Charlie Christian, but he has added ao imaginative, probing ap-proach that brings in colors, shadings and rhythmic effects that were not part of Mr. Christian's manoer. On Wednesday evaning, the trio was in a "Monkish" mood, as Mr. Dunbar used several Thelonious Monk compositions as a basis for provocative improvisations that aptly joined his own personal flourisbes to Mr. Monk's distinctive originals.

The trio as a whole is an intensely rhythmic group, as any ensemble with Mr. Barron and Mr. Carter in it would be But while Mr. Barron contributed strongly to the sweping aurge of the trio, his solos tended to thin out ioto repetitive, colorless circling patterns.

David Smith Art at Storm King -

By LESLIE MAITLAND

In a sleepy hollow nestled in the rolling hills that over-look the Hudson River, the Storm King Art Center in Mountainville is waking from its winter nap.

The center-made up of a museum housed in a Normandy-style mansion and a 200acre sculpture garden — is open to the public now, after heing closed since October. and is devoting its season to the sculpture of David Smith.

The choice, to some extent, was an embitious one. The late artist is regarded by many critics as one of the greatest American sculptors of the century. The center plans to rotate the pieces it is exhibiting throughout the summer, so as to provide a broad and varied showing of his work. The choice was also a natural coe.

Smith was a burly man who loved the rural countryside of Bolton Landing, where he worked for 26 years before bis death in an automobile accident in 1965 at the age of 59. So he would have been pleased, it is easy to imagine, to know his massive pieces are exhibited in a landscape so similar to the one where they were born. "Cuhi XXVII"—a frame of polished stainless steel, composed of rectangles, cubes and cylinders stacked oo top of one another, which he completed just before his death-seems to embrace a vista of wooded hills here, just as it did at the artist's Bolton Landing "sculpture farm.

The work is on loan from the Guggenheim Museum and stands just beyond the patio of the gracious, bluegray museum building. Loans from galleries, private own-ers and other museums, such the Metropolitan, the Whitney, the Museum of Modern Art and the Brooklyn Museum, bave enabled the Storm King Art Center to mount a show that runs from Smith's earliest creative days to what tragically turned out to be his final

From the Museum Modern Art there is a work called "Head," completed in 1938, which — in the witty style that characterizes many of Smith's pieces — shows the face of a man that is strong from any viewing point.
Many of the pieces in the exhibition display the sort of nainted surfaces that became a source of controversy in 1974, when the critic Clement Greenberg, who was an executor of the Smith estate, acknowledged ordering their removal from a number of the sculptor's works. Several painted pieces are in the permanent collection of the Storm King Art Center, which is situated in tha Hudson highlands just beyond West Point. In 1967 the museum purchased 13 Smith works from the Mariborough-Gerson Gallery, a deal that represented the largest batch ever sold to a single buyer. Although the museum has not disclosed the purchase price, the sculptures were said to range in value at the time from $6,-000 to $50,000.

Among those from the permanent collection that inch bronze. A major contributor to the museum's purchase of the sculptures was the late Ralph E. Ogdeo, chairman of the hoard of Star Expansion Industries of Mountainville, manufacturers of fasteners. In 1959 Mr. Ogden was in-strumental in founding the Storm King Art Center in the mansion built in 1935 by the late Vermont E. Hatch, who was a prominent New York

Mr. Hatch had used stones from the former Armstrong mansion at Danskammer and also imported five Ionic columns from there to the Mountainville estate. Those now stand at the south end of the property, looming impressively over the Gov. Thomas E. Dewey Thruway in the valley just below. The house, its walls all white, its floors parquet of varied patterns, oow houses about 40 works of the Smith

Dorothy Dehner, Smith's first wife and a well-known sculptor in her own right. She painted them in the early 1940's, Miss Dehner has explained, to record their life together at Bolton Landing, near Lake George. "The idea to paint the days and seasons of our lives came to me from the French 15th-century Book of the Hours, 'Les Très Riches Heures du Duc de Berry', which David had given me at that time," she says. "The temptation to record the beauty of that life in the country was not to he put aside."

One of the paintings, "My Life oo the Farm," done in 1942, unites 11 small scenes in naïve detail, and follows the couple from sunrise into the night, depicting everyday activities such as cleaning, toting wood and the daily mail. The museum.

Mr. Gegauff, who has written many of Chabrol screenplays, including those for "Les Biches" and this film, is supremely self-confident and alienating as Phillippe, for which he even has the right physique - fastidiously cared for but not so successfully that the first signs of age aren't apparent in the clothes he wears. They are always just a little too tight: a little too young and mod-ish for the fellow he really is. He's a man who would spend more time doing his hair than his wife would.

Miss Gegauff, whom I've oever seen before and who is Mrs. Gegauff in private life, is a stunning actress with large gray-green eyes, almost like a cat's, and a beauty that has as much to do with man-oers and expressions as with nose and jaw lines. That she remains for us someone almost as mysterious as she becomes to her husband—who never has the slightest understanding why she fi-nally leaves him-prevents the film from turning into a predictable treatise oo open marriage. ILM management is like bandling the curreocy. All finance ministers know that the quickest way to start a procession of money-stuffed suitcases towards the Swiss frontier is to talk about the oaklike qualities of their drachma or pound.

Similarly, when a movie maker finds himself saying that bis new picture is not in trouble, the crows begin to fly. So wben Robert Altman was telephoned the other day, the word trouble waited politely in the next room.

Mr. Altman was to bave taken his biggest film to datethat's not inflation, or the currency dropping, it's just a news release—to the Cannes Film Festival. It is called "Buffalo Bill and the Indians, or Sitting Bull's History Lesson," and it reworks the legend of the West from American dream into American day-trip. Paul Newman plays

Before the film went to Cannes, it came to a private screening in New York. Mr. Altman says he sensed confusion among the audience as to whether Sitting Bull-who is played in spectacular silence by an Indian from Albertawas dead by the time the film ended. He was, and Mr. Altman withdrew his picture from the festival to do some more editing on it. "We made a little structural change," he said. "It makes things clearer, but it's not going to belp those who didn't like the picture."

New York will see the results next month.

John Rowley bas variously been a sportswriter, worked for a producer and managed a marionette theater. One or two mornings a week he is to be found in the Regency Theater, a tall stork of a man surrounded by e flock of noisy and single-minded ducklings.

Mr. Rowley is spending his money—though he hopes to make some eventually—in a good cause. He rents the Re-gency on Broadway near 67th Street (and works there nights as an assistant manager to earn enough to pay for it) and brings in groups of schoolchildren to watch film

Now, with trepidation and avidity, she is preparing for a leading role in "How I Became a Holy Mother." The film will be directed by James Ivory, author of "Shakespeare Wallah" and "The Householder" and unquestionably the leading American maker of Indian films.

Based on a story by Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, it tells of the descent of a fiercely organizing European countess—hence the eyebrows—upon a swami and his disciples—hence the

> But especially for new collectors, or those less affluent than the regulars at Mr. Hamilton's semimonthly auctions at the Waldorf-Astoria, the autograph convention promises to provide a fine variety of items. There will be dealers' booths and an auction featuring the auto-graphs of Spiro T. Agnew,

Ginger Rogers, Marc Chagali Bowling Hall of Fame. There will be a card signed by both Babe Ruth and Lou Gebrig and one signed by Chiang Kai-shek, an envelope addressed from prison and signed by Jeb Stuart Magruder and a grab bag containing the signatures of Mary Pickford, Rhonda Fleming and Aller Front of this weekend's convention is a sixth-grade social-studies teacher from Public School 99 in Brooklyn named "The thrill," Mr. Darvick explains, "is knowing you have a piece of paper some famous person actually touched. And for a few seconds his mind was thinking about that signature," Mr. Darvick has been collecting autographs for 18 years, since he was 12. He has an envelope signed by both the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India, during a war between their nations, and an envelope signed by nine winners of Nobel Prizes.

"I took a big risk, sending out that envelope, with some of the signatures already on it," he says. "The first one got lost in the mail, and I had to start all over again, collecting signatures. I have the signature of Chester Nimitz, a five star admiral during World War II, on the same envelope with the signature of Kari Doenitz, the commander of the German Navy. I used to have the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, but I sold it. I have a handwritten note from Gerald Ford, addressed to me, but I'll never sell that one. It's the only known hand-signed Ford letter available, and it'a worth a couple of thousand dollars now. Just about everything that comes out of the White House today gets signed with an autopen."

The Collector's Nemesis The autopen is a machine that duplicates a signature lmost undetectably. John F. Kennedy's White House was the first to employ autopens, but it wasn't until Mr. Ford took office that a Presiden-tial secretary, in Mr. Dar-vick's words, "confessed" to their use. Autograph collec-tors speak of the autopen with disgust. "Harry Truman never used one," says Mr. Darvick. "That was one of the greatest things about Harry Truman." Mr. Darvick said the most popular autographs these days are those of Presidents and athletes, with Watergate figures, war beroes and movie stars bringing up the rear. A Jacqueline Onassis signature is still very valuable (a handwritten note from the former First Lady brought $3,000 at auction a few years ago), but not quite so sought after as it used to be. Everybody wants Greta Garbo's signature and Fidel Castro's —both almost impossible to

"THE MISSOURI BREAKS"

"SUPERWESTERN!"—Cue Magazine

"RIVETS YOU WITH ITS VIO-LENCE...a classic because it has two of the best actors in the movies riding for a confrontation! Nicholson and Brando are superb."—New York Actors and director have created a fascinating tale... an engrossing duel. The duel is on-and deadly. An entertainment of remarkable artistry and satisfaction."

"BRANDO VS. NICHOLSON-OBVIOUSLY A GREAT SHOOT-OUT, DOMINATING ANY FILM. The showdown between Brande and Nichelson is an intimate apocalypse, a last spasm of almost quiet violence between two men who know how to behave like myths. Brando and Nicholson are great fun to watch and hear. Their rhythms are beautiful. Penn and McGuane have made an intelligent, entertaining Western."—Newsweek

"Virtuoso performances by Jack Nicholson and Marlon Brando are but two ingredients in this new superwestern, impressive as spectacle and unnerving as drama. Entertaining, gripping!"—Cue Magazina

"ENTER BRANDO ... A TRIUMPH!" Judith Crist

"The picture belongs to Brando. The crazy daring. the reckless bravado of his work simply overpowers. You laugh wildly at each new lunacy, but you cannot help being fascinated by the man," -Time Magazine

"★★★½★! BRANDO IN A GLORIOUS ACTING SPREE. Watching an ébullient Brando at his wicked, scene-stealing best is just a delicious treat, Brando is still blazing trails."—New York Daily News

"Brando is a block of ice...a histrionic half-mad bounty hunter...a brilliant nut, the most relentlessly sadistic manhunter since Javert in 'Les Miserables'."—Newsweek

"Brando, without doubt proves himself master." -Judith Crist

"OVERWHELMING IN ITS POWER!" Judith Crist

"Brando is the grotesque, righteous madness that brings death. Nicholson is warm flesh. The easygoing leader of a gang of rustlers, handles the living with a happy desire, granting the request of the rancher's daughter to deflower her with tact and tenderness. Nicholson bursts in on Brando, who's soaking in his tub. Sweeping aside the soap bubbles. Nicholson looks down at Brando and says with disgusted scorn, 'Jesus Christ, you're not even there'."-Newsweek

'Jack Nicholson gives his most subtle and deeply articulated performance." ---Mademoiselle

Rona Barrett, WABC-TV, says it all:

66 THE SAILOR WHO FELL FROM GRACE WITH THE SEA', rated R, is a strange and wonderful film, but with a title that probably will work against it.

66 This moody, love and horror story blends erotic sex with psychological horror in a very compelling way. Sarah Miles gives us a memorable performance, maybe even Oscar-worthy, as a repressed and lonely English widow opening her heart and seaside home to a ruggedly handsome and sensual American merchant sailor, played very well by Kris Kristofferson. It's interesting to see Kris playing the same type of character he did in 'Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore'.

66 Writer/Director Lewis John Carlino creates some very unusual circumstances and characters in a Gothic atmosphere and gives us a film that stimulates many of our senses - the beauty of the sea; the coast of Devon, England; the mystique of a sexually deprived young widow; and the excitement of her surrender to a physically attractive yet gentle and poetic man.

66A remarkable performance also emerges from a young British actor, Jonathan Kahn, who is Sarah Miles' schoolboy son, a son who is blessed with intelligence and good looks, but cursed with pubescent trauma demonstrated by his curiosity to spy on his mother's bedroom activities and a further weakness which causes him to become a member of a schoolboy band, a secret sect led by another fine young British actor, Earl Rhodes.

66Rhodes plays a young Hitler-like demon bent on the destruction of what he perceives as the universal enemy to teenagers, adults. This character of the young chief leads the story down the path to an amazing and startling climax that will leave you breathless and horrified, not unlike the film, 'Lord of the Flies'.

66 The sex in this film deserves special attention. It is erotic and sensual and probably the most explicit ever presented in an R-rated film; but it is so intelligently and artistically produced and performed, it shouldn't offend any mature adult.

66 The scenes that are most affecting are those showing the potential of children to destroy. Producer Martin Poll has given us another early entry in the Oscar Derby.

The New York Philharmonic played in Carnegie Hall last night. It was the first official performance of the orchestra there since its move to Lincoln Ceoter 14 years ago. usual aspects of dance is its schooling and various schools. Every dancer in the world can be geneologically traced back-teacher by teacherto, say, Vestris, father and son, the great French teachers, around the turn of the 19th century. Yet there are certain schools of dance—and these schools, or styles, if you choose to call them so, are of great interest to the assidnous balletgoer. Why does the French dance difer from the Russian, and way are the English so reserved, and what is the New York City Ballet doing enyway? Luckily, in New York City we can see all the various classical dance schools come together. This weekend you can have your choice of the Royal Danish Ballet-which is really the old French school with some modification-or, across the plaza at Lincoln Center, the New York City Ballet—which is really the old French school with considerable modification.

There was a great lesson in ballet styles given in New York on Wednesday night: When the former Leningrad dancer from the Kirov Ballet. Kaleria Fedicheva, partnered by Dennis Marshall, gave an early evening recital at Town Hall, and that same night the Royal Danish Ballet, at the Metropolitan Opera House, offered "La Syipbide" and the last act of "Napoli," both by the classical Franco-Dan-ish choreographer August Bournouville, and Flemming

Flindt's 'The Lesson." Both the Leningrad and Copenhagen schools stem from the same source. And, indeed, the Swedish dancer Christian Johansson, who was trained in Denmark by Bournonville, was the chief teacher in Russia toward the end of the century, and belped materialize the Russian style. Miss Fedicheva was indeed a ballerina of the Kirov Bal-let, but her style is a little too broad for what is normally thought of as Kirov taste. Her performance admittedly on a deplorable stage proved sad and inept. She danced four pieces, all in a manner that proved uniformly coy yet hard. She does indeed have the Kirov style -but not, unfortunately, the Kirov grace.

The Royal Danish also bas the same Kirov style—but an earlier version of it. The

The cotrees are also heaping platters. Our pirzola (brolled lamb chops, $7.50) and tavuk kebap (brolled chicken with peppers, onions and tomatoes, $5.50) were accompanied by string beans sparked with onloos, tomatoes, celery and herbs, heaps of rice lightly berbed and studded with chick peas, and very good salads. In addition to classic dishes such as musakka and various shish kebaps, the restaurant offers seafood as

as five vegetarian cotrees-four cold, one hot.

Luso-Brasil, 116 Lexington Avenue at 28th Street: We seldom review a restaurant without a star, oo the principle that our function is to lead you to good places rather than steer you away from others. Luso-Brasil is an exception, with virtues worth pointing out at the hazard of your encountering some faults.

The amhiance is so pleasantly relaxed that we were not bothered on the night of our visit hy erratic service and wrathful voices raised in the kitcheo at one point. When our food arrived, the portions were coormous and aothentically Brazilian in a rough country way. For a very great change, we really enjoyed the piped music—samhas and so oo with plenty of guitars and percussion.

The feljoada, Brazil's national dish, a casserole of hlack beans with cuts of assorted meats, was short on the meats but the flavor was rich. With plentiful rice and a fresh but ordinary lettuce saiad, we had more than we could eat, at $4.75. This was true also of frango à carioca (fried chicken in wine and garlic sauce), which carried with it mammoth sliess of fried potatoes as well as the rice and salad. When they say garlic at Luso-Brasil they mean garlic. This chicken dish is for garlic lovers only, which includes us. It was $4.25.

Luso-Brasil is ia a aest of ethnic restaurants, with Armenian and Indian places oearby and, across the street uptownwards, the delightful Bosphorus East (Turkish), which we reviewed here some time ago, and which we revisited last week with renewed pleasure.

Mott St. Sunday Mornings

By FRED FERRETII

Soon Leong was saying over yum chah early Sunday morning that he's just about ready to retire. His older son, Leslie, with a master's degree in finance, was working on another in marketing, and his younger son, Roland is now a dentist, and after all, he said. 40 years on the same corner is a very long time. Well, 40 years is indeed a very long time, but if Mr. Leong does decide to close his grocery store at the corner of Mott and Pell Streets in Chinatown, many of us will be the losers. For Mr. Leong, the owner of the Mon Fong Wo Company at 36 Pell Street since he took over from his father in 1936, is not only the quintessential Chinese-American grocer, but he has also been tutor, guide and gentle teacher to decades of shoppers cooks and cooking teachers.

Mr. Leong is at his best oo Sunday mornings, when he is able to linger over a single stalk of bok choy, testing its crispness, while simultaneously arranging a shipment of 10,000 pounds of iced vegetables to Atlanta,

Here is a partial guide to early Sunday morning food shopping in Chinatown. All of the groceries, markets, tea shops, eating places and food accessory stores are open by 8 A.M. for what is perhaps the neighborhood's busiest retail day.

of sampling dishes—is at Hong Gung, 30 Pell Street.

Mr. Leong's performance on those mornings is likely to be repeated by his fellow grocers, bakers, butchers, fishmongers, noodle makers and tea house proprietors in Chinatown. That's because

Sunday is the day when all of Chinatown shops.
Virtually all of the food and food-oriented stores in the neighborhood are open at 8 A.M. on Sundays. To amble from one to another is lovely morning exercise, one that can be enhanced by hopping into a tea house for tea and pastries or into a place like Hong Gung at 30 Pell Street for yum cha.

Yum cha is a Chinese breakfast-lunch custom that involves drinking tea and ext-ing a bewildering array of hot foods served from wheeled carts pushed about as you sit and sip. Last Sunday, for example, Mr. Leong sat with his visitors teng car with his visitors at a corner table at about 8:10 in the morning and channel while they ate:

chestnuts.
Jin chung fan, broad rice noodles stuffed with bean sprouts and shredded chicken. These dishes, served in individual tiny plates, cost about 70 cents to $1.20 a plate, with most by counting the plates and adding the price of the pot of tea. It is a delightful mexpensive way to brunch. But as with shopping itself, the visitor is warned to visit Hong Gung before 10 in the morning, because the line is usually out into the street by that time.

Time is a factor for shoppers particularly. The trucks generally arrive at the many markets on Mott, Pell, Doymarkets on mott, ren, boy-ers Bayard, Mulberry and Canal Streets around 7 o'clock, and by the time the vegetables are unpacked and arranged for display in the grocers' windows still coated with dew, it is about 8. That's really the time to shop. To go later is often to find vegetables somewhat vegetables somewhat wilted. To go later is find crowds. To go later is to lose fine browsing time.

At 8 in the morning in Mr. Leong's shop and in that of his neighbor Wing Fat, across Mott Street, in Kamman on Canal Street, King Chong on Bayard Street, these vegetables are available.

of Minerals and Gems at the American Museum of Natural History may find their first exploration of this spectacu-lar exhibition, which opens today, enhanced by a few

Six thousand of the most spectacular mineral speci-mens from the museum's collection have been put on display in one of the largest and most ambitious exhibi-tion halls the museum has yet attempted.

Unlike the prosaic room in which these objects, collectively valued at $50 million, formerly reposed in monotonous rows of glass cases, the new permanent ball displays each stone — from sparkling crystals to massive blocks of ore—to its most esthetic advantage.

The new hall, almost entirely covered with earth-tone carpeting and felt, is built on many levels with steps and ramps leading to individual displays, special side chambers for audio-visual displays and two small amphitheaters for teaching DUITOSES.

The dark, irregularly shaped environment is supposed to suggest a cavern deep within the earth, studded with sparkling crystals of many shapes, colors and chemis-

"I've been on many a min-eralogical exploration," said Dr. Vincent Manson, who is in charge of the hall, "and the atmosphere one feets in here is very much like that of going down into the earth to explore for minerals."

The hall is on the first floor, west of the 77th Street entrance to the museum. Go through the Biology of Man Hall to the far end and you will be in a transitional room called the Hall of Meteorites. A kind of meteorite garden, the room holds 12 samples of this interplanetary matter out of which the earth may have been formed and chunks of which are still raining down upon the planet. A Lot of Copper

Beyond the meteorites is the main Hall of Minerals. There is no hest way to view the individual exhibits but one way might be to turn to the left and follow the long curving wall.

Along this wall are displayed the various classes of to their chemistry and meth-od of formation. At any point along this wall, one may turn around and see, in a facing display case, examples of how the same mineral may occur in widely different forms. Near the far end of the curved wall is a small amphi-theater with a 4.5-ton block of copper ore on a central pedestal. The ore, a mixture of azurite and malachite, is an extraordinary specimen by itself, but for a fuller discussion of copper's role in the earth and in art and industrial society, one may climb out of the amphitheater and go opposite the curving wall. There one may see and hear a 15-screen slide show on the formation of copper, how it is mined and what the tradeoffs are in destroying a cop-per-mountain ecosystem to acquire the beautiful and use-in an adjacent side chamber is the Hall of Gems where scores of cut and uncut diamonds, emeralds, rubies, sapphires and other valued stones are on display. These include such famed specimens as the Star of In-dia sapphire, the deLong Star ruby and the Khedive diamond.

In this same room, on temporary loan, are such huge diamonds as the 128.5-carat Tiffany diamond, valued at $5 million, and the equally valued Zale Light of Peace, which weighs more than 130 carats. Some of the lent

Art: Cletus Johnson's 'Theate:

By HILTON KRAMER

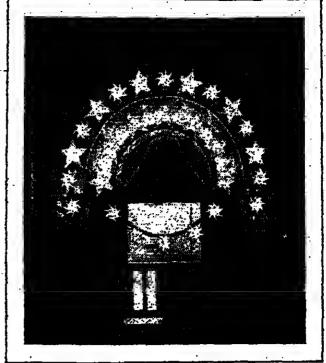

WO years ago, an un-known artist—Cletus bit of a stir in e show-Sachs Gallery with his as-tooishing "theaters." These were shadowbox construc-tioos of imaginary movie-palace entrances and facades painted a ghostly mono-chrome gray and embellished with beguiling architectural details and eerie, tiny lights.

Not exactly sculpture and not exactly paiotiog, but combining elements of both in a moving evocation of a loat urban world, "theaters" very quickly established themselves as e very iodividthemselves as a very locivid-ual artistic statement. At times looking like a personal archeology of the old Times Square. Mr. Johnson's art had a nostalgic dreamlike quality that lived oo easy terms with a very fastidious attention to decorative detail. It maneged et the same time, too, to harbor a certain sly humor.

Mr. Johnaoo is unknown no longer. He has lately had a oumber of one-man shows most recently at the Neu-berger Museum in Purchase, N. Y. and at the Arts Club in Chicagn — and he is now showing new work (through June 10) at the Sachs Gal-lery, 29 West 57th Street. This exhibition is divided into two parts. One is devoted to a new series of "theaters." Mr. Johnson has now produced enough of these for us to be able to distinguish between the "classic" versions and the wilder, more eccentric variations Among the eccentric "Fort-night" — with its windows all askew in a dizzying dance of architecture goose mad — is me of the most arresting. "Florence," with its female torso io relief surrounded by a crown of glit-tering starlights, looks almost innocent by comparison.

One begins oow to notice new things in these "thea-ters." In "End of the Day," the shadowy, deserted eotrance has something of the quality of an Edward Hop-per paiotiog. We are suddenly reminded that there are no people in these "theaters." They are like those Hopper paintings in which the sense of isolation and loneliness is or isolation and ioneliness is expressed cotirely through empty space and a macabre light. Like Hupper's, Mr. Johnson's work defines an archetypel experience. The second part of the exhibitioo is devoted to col-lages, and these are quite different from the shadowbox theaters. Very spare and very white, constructed of unwooden cornices. postcard reproductions and other "found Items," they elegance. My own favorites are the works that focus on en architectural motif — es-pecially the beautiful "Colon-nade." Which, come to think of it, is oot so different from the theme of the "theaters," after all.

Other exhibitions this week include the following: Henryk Stazewski (Gruene-haum, 25 East 77th Street); Born in 1894 in Warsaw, Mr.

Stazewski is one of the clas-sic figures in the history of Eastern European Constructivism, and he remains a vigorous artist today. The present exhibition is e small retrospective of paiotings and reliefs that will later travel to the Phoenix (Ariz.) Art Muscum. We thus follow the artist's development from the artist's development from his early Abstract Expressionist works of the 1920's to the purist works of the later years. Among the later, there is an especially beautiful. "Blue Relief" (1958) that reminds one of Arp, and a "Hatch Drawing" (1974) that recalls the artist's asso-

Is it relevant that "Totem and Taboo" was completed in circumstances of poverty and oppression and that Agnes Martin made her recent paintings a very long way from New York? Yes and no. Big artists follow a compass needle that suits them only. Joan Miró in his day was a master of the art of alarm, but with age (he is 83 this year) he allows himself at most a grandfa-

Till July 5 visitors to the mezzanine of the South Tower of the World Trade Center can see during office hours the majestic and discreetly hilarious tapestry by Miró that is on loan from the Galerie Maeght in Paris. It proves what has been proved over and over again in art: that one human being can encompass the whole gamut of expression if he allows life to speak through him, What was it that Igor Stravinsky sald? Street (through tomorrow only); glimpsed among woods and streams, he looks like a Robinson Crusoe who is inno hurry to be rescued. Something of moral energy goes out of a great city when people like Jasper Johns no longer care to live in it.

So what is hig at this moment in the galleries? Photographs, for one thing. Our generation is sensitized to photographs the way our grandfathers were sensitized to the trans-Atlantic liner and the electric hrougham. They are part of the vocabulary of human exchange. And how time is on their side! Even people who wouldn't normally look twice at a fashion photograph will find that Horst's photographs of 20 and 30 years ago (Sonnabend Gallery, 420 West Broadway, through June 5) now bear crisp witness to a period that might as well have been before the flood for all that now remains of for all that now remains of it. And with Lotte Jacobi (Kimmel-Cohn, 41 Central Park West, at 64th Street, through June 10) we really are on the far side of the flood; for her main subject was Berlin in its last moments as a whole and moments as a whole and open city. To see Einstein, Furtwängler and Lotte Lenya through her eyes is a hig ex-

Such is the ascendancy of the photograph that the Rosa Esman Gallery, 29 West 57th Street, is on to a sure thing with its show (through May 29) of photographs by artists. The good news is that certain very gifted people are every bit as inept as ourselves when it comes to handling the camera. But it is worth seeing the elegant way in which Sol LeWitt treats the theme of "the grid through the ages," skittering this way and that from great architec-ture to the humdrum contrivances of our own day. After a tour of this sort, we may consider the idee fixe as well and truly buried and ourselves as the fortunate inhabitants of the most rewarding city in the world.

One of the biggest collectors of current American art is an Italian, Dr. Giuseppe Panza di Biumo. The art dealer Leo Castelli calls him "unique—there's never been anything like him in modern or every older times." And or even older times." And small wonder. Since the 1950's Dr. Panza, an industrialist, has bought from Mr. Castelli and other dealers hundreds of works by American contemporaries, often seven or eight at a clip, and carried them off to his family seat, an 18th-century palazzo in Varese, outside of Milan. There, he has filled at least 50 rooms with the objects, redesigning whole floors to create "perfect" installations for Minimal works, deploying environmental pieces in barns and stables, placing other contemporary art in Wavering over Minimal art.

Dr. Panza finally took the plunge, acquiring at least 25 works by Donald Judd, installing a whole new floor for pieces hy Robert Morris and Dan Flavin. Now he's in-volved with such 70's artists as Richard Serra, Bruce Nau-man, Douglas Huebler, Rich-ard Nonas and Lawrence Weiner. Of late, he has even heen buying artists' plans and schemes, often inviting them to Varese to work them out on the premises.

Those of us not invited to Varese will be able to catch a glimpse of the collection here, however, by way of an extensive group of photographs showing tha works in situ at the palazzo. They are on view now as the fifth and fittal show in the "Collectors of the Seveoties" series, staged by The Clocktower, that enterprising outpost of the severy carde at 108 Leothe avant-garde at 108 Leonard Street.

Mario Amaya, the former director of the New York Cultural Center, the marble palazzo on Columbus Circle that folded last year for lack of funds, promises us bucolic delights this summer in Queens. He is guest-directing a show at the Queens Museum, opeoing July 15, called "The Cow in Art." Why this bovioe homage? "It's high time we celebrated cows," says Mr. Amaya. "They've says Mr. Amaya. With heavy loans from the Metropolitan Museum, the exhibition will range from Syrian art through the Dutch landscapists Paulus Potter and Pieter Cuyp on down to —you guessed it, Andy Warbol. Mr. Amaya has even flushed some conceptual artists who, he aays, will do cov pleces in Flushog Meadcw Park. "It will be a real family show, he avers."

that his Central Park cannel-looi be the equal of his 44th Street cannelloni, even though served on plastic-covered cardboard dishes. His boss, Vincent Sardi, is enthusiastic about the project, though it is un-Italian to serve the pasta without the antipasto. This combination won't be possible, because each restaurant and purveyor will operate out of a 12-foot by 12-foot booth and will serve one dish only.

Oysters From All Over

It will require 700 people to present the food and drink; S20 of them in the restaurant booths, including the four cyster shuckers to be dispatched by the Oyster Bar. "We will offer five kinds of oysters," said George Mor-

fogen, buyer and assistant manager of the Oyster Bar.

Mr. Morfogen talks about bivalves with the awc and respect one usually detects only in the voices of football an-nouncers when they describe the running of O. J. Simpson.

The Oyster Bar will offer Wellfleets from Cape Cod Bay. Cotuits from Nantucket Sound, Chincoteagues from Tom's Cove, Va. bluepoints from Long Island and Louisianas from you-know-where, Wellflests are not all that

Each oyster will cost one "apple" — 25 cents — and there will be two kinds of sauces in the bargain: the traditional cocktail sauce and sauce made from shallots. "We will serve all of them raw on the haifshell," sald Mr. Morfogen. "There will be no frying because once you fry an oyster you can't even tell a Welifleet from a Chin-

Although tomorrow's event was Stuart Levin's idea and (he runs The Top of the Park), the restaurant people are trying to emphasize that it will be of interest even to those who really don't care if their eggs are sarved with Hollandaise sauce or sunny sida up. Variety of Entertainment

There will be five areas of entertainment, ranging from a mechanical cow with a tail that wags and udders that shudder to a young man who will move through the crowd juggling big apples to a wom-am who, 40 years ago, was hilled as "The /=erican Songbird." She is Lucy Lowe, famed for her renditions of "Tm Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage" and "She's Only a Shopgirl at Macy's," e song that once incurred the displeasure of members of Macy's staff.

Her repertory tomorrow will include songs that go all the way back to the founding of this nation, and with the help of her accompanist, Richard Eikenberry, she will sing lyrics that suggest New York of old had problems not at all dissimilar from those of today. In "The Subway Glide," written in 1915, Miss Lowe will give us an idea of how one songwriter viewed New York's underground: If you get bumped, then hump 'm right back again; If all the while hang onto your locket Look out for your pocket-

Oh, watch that guy ...

Miss Lowe doesn't sing rock music or the tunes of Cole Porter and Richard Rodgers, "I leave show tunes to other folks," she said. One song that might have beeo appropriate will not be sung by Miss Lowe because it does not fit into her repertory. Others, however, may sing it before the day is over Plop, plop, fizz, fizz. For Bella Abzug, one answer is swimming in a friend's pool in Connecticut. For Diane Von Furstenberg, it's gallery hopping in Sollo. And for Bobby Short, it's bicycling to Greenwich Vil-. lage for lunch at Trattoria da Alfredo, better known as "Alfredo's."

What do celebritles do on Saturday afternoons? Welt, allowing for a difference in hank accounts and the fact that msny of them have country estates, they do pretty much what we simpler folk do.

For Andy Warhol, the artist and film maker, Saturday means going to food shops like Perrone's at 1120 Third Avenue. "I like that a lot," he said. "I buy fresh fruit and waretables on Saturdays. and vegetables on Saturdays. That's the only axarcise I get—carrying heavy shopping bags."

Many metropolitan area notables insist they don't do anything on Saturdays ex-cept work. But when pressed, almost all of them will admit to e little relaxation now and then.

Long walks are also a favorile Saturday activity of Bess Meyerson, the consumer advocate, and Gloria Swanson, the actress and health faddist, who says her higgest problem is trying to find a place to walk where there is no carbon monoxide in the air, ("Central Park is the best place," she said.)

"I love New York, especially on Saturday," Miss Meyerson said. "I love to come outside and decide which direction t'm going to walk for a mile or two Usually it's into the park or along Lexington Avenue.

The city is so vibrant."
When it rains on Saturday, Miss Meyerson said she often forms musical trios or quartets with her sister and her nieces, and they play for bours. Miss Meyerson is a pianist and a flutist.

For Lee Radziwill, the ideal Saturday is spent at her beach housa in Southampton, L.I., where she likes to walk on the beach for "miles and miles."

Bowling is a favorite Saturday activity of Vivian Reed, who was nominated for a Tony this year for her performance in the Broadway missical, "Bubhling Brown Sugar." "I love bowling-I once won a trophy when I bowled 209," said Miss Reed, who can often be found at Lenox Lanes, 146 West 146th Street, or Circle Bowling, 919

For some time special 12-inch pressings of lengthy disco hits have been made available to disco disk jockeys in limited pressiogs. Although they look like regular LP's, these disks—especially those that revolva at 45 R.P.M.—play only about 10 minutes per side. But because of the wide-spaced grooves and the faster speed, they can deliver a crisp, crunching fidelity superior both to regular LP's and to extended play seven-inch 45's.

Because of that, these special disco pressings have commanded high underground prices among disco colletors. Now Salsoul Records has decided to market such records publicly. The first release is of Double Exposure's "10 Percent," in two versions. It's a lively, danceable tune, but the sound is the thing. The oew records sell at a list price of $2.98, which at discount prices should come out to less than a comparable amount of music on seven-inch 45's.

There are two large-format, paperback books worth checking out. Jerry Osborne's "The Record Collector's Price Guide" (O'Sullivan Woodside & Co., Phoenix, $6.95) offers what Mr. Osborne says are the going prices for "good" and "near mint" copies of some 20,000 45's—8,000 consisting of the top 40 between 1950 and 1965.

Mr. Osborne says be was aided by "more than 100 experts" in compiling his information, And even if you don't plan to scour the oldies stores, it certainly makes amusing

Larry Sandberg's and Dick Weissman's "The Folk Music Sourcebook" (Alfred A. Knopf, New York, $7.95) is a more dignified affair. The authors offer annotated discographies of nearly every form of American folk-music imaginable, from country and urban blues of various sorts to piano blues to jug and string bands to ragtime to gospel to Creole, American Indian, Chicano, Canadian and Cajun music to pre-Country Anglo-American folk music to Western swing to various sort of folk-oriented present-day music. There also are shorter discographies of folk music of other parts of the world (especially Britain), plus extensive listings of songbooks, reference works and instructional books, chapters on instrument care and lists or organizations, festivals, periodicals, films and archives.

It is interesting to cote that Mr. McCarthy's forces will be quite similar in number to those stipulated by Bach in 1730. In a famous memorandum to church officials in Leipzig, headed "Short But Most Necessary Draft for a Well-Appointed Church Music: with Certain Modest Re-flections on the Declina of the Same," Bach calls on the officials to provide him with at least 36 capable singers and 18 instrumentalists.

The "at least" part of that request is where the controversy has swirled, and it can justify for many conduc-tors Bach performances with hundreds of voices, including women, and full symphony orchestras. Even for the purist, however, in a major musical center such as New York, it is still not easy to round up a full band of pld instruments such as the viola flection of the tooe colors da gamba, the baroque oboe, and textures intended by the keyless bunting born and the wooden flute. So most performances turn out to be riddled with compromises, the typical way being to throw in a couple of old in-struments to suggest an antique coloration but to let tha modern symphonic in-struments carry the burden. Mr. McCarthy, who found-ed the Newark Boys Choir and led it for eight years be-fore moving on to Brooklyn and opening a choir school there in 1974, knows his subject from various angles, having prepared choruses for such conductors as Leonard Bernstein, Sixten Ehrling, Sarah Caldwell, Eugene Ormandy and Pierre Boulez. Despite his experience in training groups for concerthall performance, or prob-ably because of that experience, Mr. McCarthy says be is convinced that Bach's great choral works must be done in churches: "The church resonance is part of the composer's concept, in the way that church resonance is part of the concept of organ voicing." And he shares none of the prejudices against boy sing-ers that most musicians used to hold, and many still hold. Children are no different from adult singers if you treat them as adults. They are better learners, in fact. They don't need coffee breaks, they don't mind standing around for long periods, and they have a longer attention span than choruses made up of man and women. These boys learned the TR. John Passion in five weeks, and nt wasn't difficult at all for them."

The learning job was simplified somewhat by the use of an English translation (by Robert Shaw) in place of the original German, but in the complete version planned by Mr. McCarthy the "St. John" still adds up to more than two bours of exceptionally hard music.

"This year we bave a total of 37 boys in the school, all on full scholarships of $3,000 a year, and I hope we can have 60 cert year." Mr. McCarthy said. "Td like to do all the centered of Bach with all the cantatas of Bach with boys, as well as the passions.
I want to do Beethoven's Nioth Symphooy and Missa Sciennis, and the Mozart masses. I'd like to do about 10 Bach cantatas a year, if the money could be found for such a project." Since more than 200 of Bach's 295 church cantatas survive, that would be a 20-year plan. Mr. McCarthy is not one to dream short dreams.

Because of bis Newark past, Mr. McCarthy has a large contingent of choristers from that city-26 boys, in fact, who are bused to Brooklyn each day. All 37 boys, most of them black, go to choir school three and onehalf hours a day at the Long sland University Learning Center and study at their own grammar school for four and one-half more hours. The chorus is now a resident company of the Brooklyn Academy of Music and its benefactors include such onetime boy musicians as Leonard Bernstein and Andre

"I love electric music," says Mr. Clarke, "but I think I still feel more at home on the acoustic bass, and I get the impression from audience reactions that a return to acoustic music is edefinitely wbere it'a at."

The members of Return to Forever are in their mid-20's except for Mr. Corea, who is in his mid-30's, and like most other young jazzmeo they have had classical training. What is surprising, considering their extensive jazz experieoce—Mr. Corea and Mr. White were with Miles Davis, and Mr. Clarke played with Sten Getz and Pharoah Sanders — is the emphasis they are placing on their classical iofluences, often at the expense of improvisational

HERE will, after all, be a second book by Margaret Mitchell. Forty years after "Gone With the Wind" was published and 27 years after the death of its author, a collection of her letters is being readied by the Macmillan Company for October publication. The collection will be edited by Richard Harwell, and all the letters in it will be connected to some way with the novelletters to reviewers, readers, publishers, movie people and the like.

According to Mr. Harwell, Miss Mitchell "vigorously opposed the publication of any of her letters during her lifetime." After the death of her husband, Jobo R Marsh, in 1952, the novelist's brother. Stephens Mitchell, inberited her literary rights. He op-posed the publication of her letters, but has now "reluc-tantly" given permission.

Writers of successful first novels fear that they will become known as one-book authors, that they will never doplicate that first success. Margaret Mitchell never voiced that fear.

"I not only do not intend to set about a book too soon," she wrote J. Donald Adams, "but, thank God, never intend to write another one." She kept her word. Her private correspondence was destroyed after her death, and a sbort work of fiction, "'Ropa Carmagin." which she had let Macmillan look at, was also destroyed.

But just as "Gooe With the Wind" was no ordinary publishing phenomenon, so it was no ordinary first novel either. The correspondence, entitled "Margaret Mitchell's 'Gone With the Wind' Letters 1936-1949," reveals how the book expanded to fill ber

Readers challenged her on historical facts; on alleged anachronisms. Tales were made up:

And there are many other wonderful bits and pieces in "The Franchiser," not least among them the novel's basic premise: Ben Flesh is called out of Wharton Business School to the bedside of his dying godfather, who has grown wealthy in a godiather, who has grown weathy in a theatrical costume business he won from Ben's father by drawing the low card in a deck-split when the two were starting ont in the Depression. Out of guilt for the way he won the business ("I palmed a deuce"), the godiather bequeaths to Ben the right to have up at the prime integer. the right to borrow at the prime interest rate, providing he looks after his 18 god-cousins, all of whom are either twins or triplets ("... my godfather had indeed been set in his ways, so stubborn in them in fact, so much the immutable bachelor at fifty-three and four and five, and so on, that his very sperm, his very genes had become like a single minting of dimes,

He would "costume his country . . give it its visible props, its mansard roofs and golden arches and false belfries, all its ubiquitous neon signatures and logos, all its things, all its crap, the true American graffiti, that perfect queer calligraphy of American signa-tures, what gave it meaning and made it Still, for all the magic of Elkins language, for all the canny black humor of his image of America, and for all the poignancy of his lonely bero crisscrossing the continent in his air-conditioned late-model Cadillac, the hard fact remains that I found myself perking up at the prospect of some-thing really happening to the hero of 'The Franchiser" after he opens his Travel Inn, something that would fundamentally alter the novel's premise. This would seem to indicate that I had not been entirely awake up to this point, that for all Mr. Elkins marvelous playfulness there remains a thin edge of tedium in his static plot situation.

It's a sad fact I'd like to deny for Mr. Elkin's sake but simply can't a novel can't get away without telling a story, yet "The Franchiser" is 90 percent exposition and only 10 percent further development. As in his earlier novels "Boswell," "A Bad Man," "The Dick Gibson Show" and collections of stories, "Criers and Kibbitzers, Kibbitzers and Criers,' and "Searches and Seizures," in "The Franchiser" Stanley Elkin has written one of the more original works of fiction of the season. But alas, what happens to Ben Flesh-what allows us to imagine him as flesh instead of as a scarecrow on which to drape comic routines-isn't finally enough to grasp our attention completely.

draws on his expert knowledge of government, war, our American folkways - and the controversy, sad and bitter for all concerned, which attended his effort to set down the circumstances of the death of President Kennedy." -Paul Horgan

"I have read with delight William Manchester's collection of his notable articles. His thumbnail sketches of the last three wars in which America was concerned are just about perfect."-Samuel Eliot Morison

"For the historical record, I am glad William Manchester is revealing the inside details of the pre-publication controversy that exploded around his famous book Death of a President. As publisher of Look magazine, which was to serialize that book, I can testify that Manchester in no way exaggerates the almost unbelievable efforts made to try to force him to edit his manuscript in ways which would have twisted the historical truth. To his everlasting credit, Manchester did not capitulate. Anyone at all interested in American history will find the entire book fascinating reading. He writes with such clarity and color, each of the eighteen essays is a gem."-Gudner Cowles

Take an elevator to the 26th flour observatory (open free Monday through Saturday from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M.) where there is ao excellent skyline view. The observatory houses a remarkable Bicentennial display (installed by the Long Island Historical Socity) about the Battle of Long Island. With the aid of graphics and relief maps, early applies and current aboto. etchings and current photo-graphs, the viewer can trace the course of the battle in August 1776, when the Brit-ish came off ships in Gravesend Bay, swept through the Flatbush Pass—a valley that is now the route of Flatbush Avenue through Prospect Park—and drove General Washington's hopelessly outnumbered forces across the Looking down nn what was then isolated aettlements, hills, grassy slopes, trees and

A walk over to Fort Greene Park offers a look at the Area's restorations. Turn left on leaving the bank and make another left turn at the next corner into St. Felix Street, where three fine houses are being rescued from deterioration by the Brooklyn Union Gas Company under its Cinderella project. How to Get There

The area is crisscrossed by subway lines and bus routes. Perhaps the most convenient place to begin would be to take a subway to the Atlantic Avenue station (or the Pacific Street station right next to it). Almost all of the subway lines stop at one of the two stations, but the most enjoyable trip with a panorama of the harbor is on the D or N train over the Manhattan Bridge. The Long Island Rail Road also goes to Atlantic Avenue. By car from Manhattan, the Manhattan Bridge to Atlantic Avenue is the most

Starting in another directioo from the bank, turn right and walk up State Street to see a lovely row of rehabilitated brownstones in the Boerum Hill section. Turn left off State and then right on Atlantic Avenue to visit a string of antique shops and other shops, including one at No. 364 where Sandra Brauer makes and displays stained-glass work in a sunny studio that is open from 1 to 6 P.M. tomorrow and Sunday. From the bank take a bus down Flatbush Avenue-unless you really feel like walking—to Seventh Avenua, the bustling main street of Park Slope (named because it is on a gentle hill sloping down from Prospect Park).

from Prospect Park).

Drop in at such shops as the Clay Pot, at No. 162, to view handmade pottery, or at the Brownstone Gallery, at No. 76, which sells 19th-and 20th century paintings and a 22-by-28-inch map of historic Park Slope (for sale at $2:50 plain or $18.50 framed in acetate).

In the next block, on Eighth Avenue at Lincoln Place, is one of the borough's Place, is one of the borough's architectural treasures, the Montauk Club, modeled in 1891 after the Ca' d'Oro in Venice. An intricate frieze above the third-story windows depicts the life of Long Island's Montauk lodians.

Five blocks south, running only one block between Eighth Avenue and Prospect Park, is Montgomery Place, which has been called one of the city's finest streets architecturally

Brownstoning

If you want to know more about finding, buying or renovating a brownstone of your own, the Brooklyn Union Gas Company has turned one brownstone at 93 Prospect Place, just off Flatbush Avenue, into a brownstone information center. Carol Lesbner is !n charge there and appointments can be made to talk with her any day, in-cluding weekends, by calling 643-4293.

Refreshment

Tired of walking? Head over toward Seventh Avenue to one of the neighborhood bars—the Stack O' Barley at the corner of First Street or Snooky's Pub at No. 140. For lighter refreshment, the Gazebo Natural Food is next door at No. 142 and across the street, at No. 119, the Cast-A-Ways Thrift Shoppe has a sign in the window inviting passers-by to "cof-fee, tea or hot chocolate in the parlows." the parlour."

Bookshops

Good for browsing are the Sisyphus Bookstore at 235 DeKalb Avenue, with a used book annex at No. 237; the Community, Book Store at 143 Seventh Avenue, with a doorway bulletin board over-flowing with notices of go-ings-on in the community; and the Second Story Book Shop at 147 Seventh Avenue where the bright Yellow steps carry the message: "Don't be lazy, books are waiting for you upstairs."

Entertainment

Oversbadowing all else in Brooklyn in the performing arts is the Brooklyn Academy of Music at 30 Lafayette Avenue. BAM, as almost evaryone calls it, offers dance, drama, music and film in four separate performing areas that range in size from 200 to 2,200 seats. In "A Gardener Touched With Genius" (Coward Mc-Cann & Geoghegan, $10), Pe-ter Dreyer explores the life of America'a master gardener. The fact that he was a gardener rather than a hota-nist, or even a horticulturist, was one of the leading causes of Burbank's quickly fading renown —he kept no records to authenticate his discoveries. His introduction of the russet Burbank potato changed the course of spud culture in this country, and his plums laid the ground-work for much of today's California fruit industry. But his egotistical personality, tangled financial affairs and penchant for mysticism denied him much of a place in

A collection of observations of environmen-tal activists, both individuals and organizations, the book gives details on such projects as that of Capt. J.P. Perkins, who planted temporary ever-greens on his Great Lakes freighter for hird shelters, as well as on more conventional clean-up, reforestation and help - the - injured - animals campaigns of North American residents. is "Good Things Are Hap-

about nature today. For a basic background on bome gardening, try "Seed to Civilization," a paperback by Charles B. Heiser Jr. (W. H. Freeman & Company, San Francisco, $3.95). Basically this small textbook packs a lot of information, not of the how-to variety but rather of the kind that will make you feel part of the great agricultural chain that has fed man ever since he began cultivating plants.

Consider also "The Apartment Farmer" by Duane Newcomb (J. P. Tarcher, Los Angeles, distributed by Haw-thorn Books, $4.95). The subtitle. "The Hassle-Free Way to Grow Vegetables Indoors, on Balconies, Patios, Roots and in Small Yards," more or less sums it up.

Somehow one never has enough plants, and propaga-tion becomes a central topic for most gardeners of both the indoor and outdoor variety. On this front there is good news — the revised third edition of Hudson T. Harmano's and Dale E. Wester's "Plant Propagation: Principles and Practices (Prentice-Hall, $17.25). Given choice of having only one book on plant propagation, "Once Is Not Enough" was made into the film. "The late Ms. Susann was accorded the the serious gardener or horticulturist could want to know.

> What most gardeners also need is a handy reference volume to those landscaping staples, trees and shruhs John Burton Brimer's "The Home Gardener's Guide to Trees and Shrubs" (Haw-thorn, $14.95) fills the bill very nicely. Using a question-and-answer style leads to aome rather long-winded hedging in spots, but on the whole the technique works, and the ample selection of charts makes for easy decisions on height, color, fragrance and the like.

A more spectacular, if limited, volume is "Ornamental Conifers" hy Charles R. Harrison (Hafner, $17.95). Detailed as to bardiness, plant description and some history, this British book fails to give any specific soil require-ments and growing conditions. But, with its extensive use of color photography, the volume is a great aid from a design point of view and would make an excellent adjunct to any of the more detailed cultivation volumes availabla.

Another British volume, "The Color Dictionary of Shrubs" by S. Miller Gault (Crown, $1S.95), also is very handy. It has been adjusted for North American gardens by Georga Kalmbacher and is not so inappropriate as most imports. The more than S00 color illustrations can be a great aid in planning a gar-den, although the absence of any readily discernible scale can make for difficulties.

Billy Swan Roaring in Rockabilly

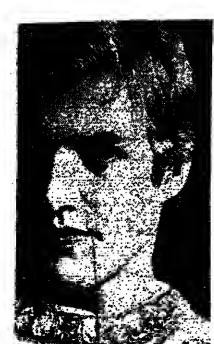

Billy Swan is appearing at the Other End through Sunday with a roaring rockabilly band. His guitarist, Tim Krekel, twangs out chordal solos worthy of Carl Perkins. while a saxophonist plays fills from the 1950's and a pianist sweeps up and down the keyboard in the style of Jerry Lee Lewis.

Mr. Swan, who played in Kris Kristofferson's band before recording a hit single called "I Can Help" and branching out on his own, is not an archivist. He evidently worships Mr. Presley and the other early rockabilly stars, but he does fresh things with their material and with the idiom itself. He slows down 'Mr. Presley's "Don't Be Cruel," making it a deliberate, almost menacing rock tune, and he spices his own rockabilly composi-tions with unison guitar lines, broken-up bass patterns and other contempora-

Not all of Mr. Swan's songs connect, at least not with this reviewer. But hearing real rockabily music played affectionately, not imitatively, and with conviction and fire is a rare treat. If Mr. Swan would give his band a bit more room to build the overwhelming momentum it achieves on the faster numbers, it would be even easier to forgive the unevenness of his material. ROBERT PALMER rather, when the promise of great-ness la fulfilled. Sometimes it will be an individual performance, sometimes a season, sometimes, almost imperceptibly, simply a time. For Mr. Martins, the Royal Danish star of New York City Ballet, greatness may be said to have been a long time growing.

But now he's undisputably one of the great male dancers of the world—last Tuesday he triumphantly led his former company, the Royal Danish Ballat, in "La Sylphide" at the Metropolitan Opera House, and tonight and tomorrow afternoon he is to be seen with his own company at the New York State Theater. In the final week of the Danish season he will make other guest appearances, and, of course, he will be in res-idence throughout the City Ballet season, usually partnering Suzanne Farrell. When the 29-year-old Mr. Martins was a student at the Royal

Peter Martins is living proof that for every dancer there seems to be a time for greatness—a time, likely, and soon after he joined ways regarded as the boy most likely, and soon after he joined the company in 1965 he was given leading roles. By 1967 he was dancing the hero in Balanchine's "Apollo." That same fall, the City Ballet was at the Edinhurgh Festinal Lacrace de Ambiert in val, Jacques d'Ambnise was injured, and there was no one to dance Apollo. Balanchine aent for Mr. Martins and thus he began his long association with the New Mark City Ballot Afran a concern York City Ballet. After a season or two as a guest artist, he decid-ed to leave Copenhagen and settle in New York.

In a way Mr. Martins's looks have told against him—he almost too impossibly resembles the popular conception of a Greek god and he has a large hulky body. But his acting and dancing are now invested with skill and intelligence, and his huge movements cover the stage with the easy grace of a tiger. There is something magisterially unflustered about Mr. Martins—and he is denoting at a peak. Chill Raphies dancing at a peak. Clive BARNES

ekend Gardening Books Records: Women Composers

WOMAN'S WORK: An anthology of music by Francesca Caccini, Elisabeth Jacquet de la Guerre, Anna Amalia (Princess of Prussia), Anna Amalia (Princess of Prussia), Anna Amalia (Duchess of Saxe-Weimar), Maria Thèresa von Paradin, Jeanne Louise Dumont Farrenc, Fanny Mendelssohn Hensel, Maria Malibran, Josephine Lang, Clara Wicck Schumann, Pauline Viradot-Garcia, Louise Héritte-Viardot, Ingeborg Starck von Bronsart, Eldrida Andrée, Cécile Chaminade, Poldowski, Lill Boulangerand Germaine Tailleferre, Berence Bramson, soprano; Mertine Johns, mezzo-soprano; Vieustemps Quartet; Michael May, keyboards. Gemint Hall RAP-1010 (two disks).

This anthology of music hy "famous" women composers was assembled by Marnie Hall of the Vieuxtemps Quartet and suffers from a number of failings, all of which taken together don't detract from the interest of the proj-ect or its ultimate musical appeal.

First, hardly all the composers are famous. Women still aren't encouraged to compose, and Miss Hall's excellent notes become a chronicle of frustration and dis-couragement. Then, the anthology stops short of the present, wheo the best women composers have flourished; the most recent music bere is Tailleferre's Quartet from

In addition, the limitations of the project have precluded attention to large forms, and the need to include as many the need to include as many different composers as possible has focused attention on short works. This reflects the salon and chamber outlets open to most of these composers, but it unnecessarily reinforces that stereotype, for some of these women composers did, in fact, work in more expansive forms.

Besides, not all the 'per-formances here serve the music as well as they might. Berenice Bramson, the so-prano, is very good, but Mer-tine Johns, the mezzo, is less stylish, and the instrumental work varies between the pretty good and the very -never poor, hut never really superb, either.

Finally, some listeners might object to the very premise of this release. Music is music, they might argue, and if this particular music is really any good, it will stand on its own, without needing to be included in a feminist anthology.

This last contention ignores palpable social realities, and artistic reputations - and, hence, frequency of perform-- are inextricably tied up with social realities. Most of the music here is by demonstrably talented composers. Much of it was written to conform to formulary conventions; as such it may not match the great statements of the art, but it is hardly inferior to most of its male competition. The fact that, properly encouraged, most of these composers might have stretched beyond what they did produce is a cause for re-gret, but it hardly invalidates the charm and skill of the music they produced.

Not surprisingly, the most immediately impressive music here comes from those composers to whom the greatest amount of space has been de-voted — Clara Schumann, Pauline Viardot, Lili Bou-langer and Germsine Taille-ferre But oil of it is ferre. But all of it is worth hearing, and so this set is recommended not only to card-carrying feminists, hut also to anyone interested in musical, intellectual or social history.

Double-headed drums of variable pitch—the famous variable pitch—the famous talking drums of the Yoruba -announce the beginning of Duro Ladipo's dance-drama "Oba Koso" hy repeating its title in drum language. A praise singer compliments

Shango, tha legendary king who hecame one of the most powerful gods in the Yoruba pantheon, and is answered by a stark unison choral line. An ensemble of drums, shakers and bells enters, playing a thunderous an nouncement of the arrival at court of Shango himself, and the king makes his presence known with a reverberating

The folk motifs and compact drama of these opening moments inform the remainder of "Oba Koso" as well. Duro Ladipo, its author, is a Nigerian dramatist who was raised a Christian but hecame enchanted early in life with the traditional music drama of his people. Like his other dance-dramas, "Oba Koso" is composed entirely of traditional court ritual, oral history, poetry, music and dance, but Mr. Ladipo has lent these elements added vibrancy by welding them onto a tight narrative structure. It may seem surprising that this structure should resemble Greek tragedy. Like the world depicted by the dramatists of Athens in the fifth century B.C., old Oyo, the locale of "Oba Koso" has a king an aristocratic ad-visory body and popular generals with political ambitions who are vying for power. The dialogues between the king and his advisers that run through the plece probably owe less to Greece than to the call and response forms of Yoruba music. And other elements that seem to recall Sophocles doubtless have equally indigenous roots.

Because it is so thoroughly steeped in oral tradition, "Oba Koso" has survived the transition from stage production to recording with much ity intact. On the other hand, one can simply listen to it as a particularly well-recorded compendium of authentic Yoruba solo and choral sing-ing and drumming. ROBERT PALMER

RAMONES. Sire SASD 7530.

With this release the Ramones become the second of the mid-1970'a New York underground rock acts to make a nationally distributed al-bum; the first was Patti Smith. This is a quartet from Forest Hills, Queens, that sticks relentlessly and engagingly to its cool-punk pose, and adds to that a highly stylized extension of idiom.

Part of the pose involves a masking of identity—the four unrelated musicians call themselves Joey Ramone, Tommy Ramone, Dee Dee Ramone and Johnny Ramone -and part is the black leather jackets of the "I tried out for West Side Story, hut didn't get the part" look. Most of that is lost on records, needless to say, and it's to the band's credit that this disk sounds as good as it does. What the Ramones do ia deliver a nonstop set of short, hrisk, monochroma tically intense songs. The 14 numbers here each clock in at around 2 minutes, and conventional considerations of pace and variety are thrown calculatedly to the winds.

The ingredients are simplicity itself. One song's words in their entirety are: "I don't wanna walk around with you! I don't wanna walk around with you! So why you wanna walk around with me? I don't wanna walk around with you." The music to match consists of doubletimed guitar strokes, feverish drumming and a steady shifting back and forth between two notes of the repetition of a three or four note ostinato.

Sometimes it sounds like a formula-pop creation of Nicky Chinn and Mike Chapman. But the effect in the end amounts to an abstraction of rock so pure that other associations get left behind. It will he interesting to see if the Ramones can extend their range; if they can't, it will all seem in retrospect like an amusing gimmick. But even now you have to admire it as an assertion of style. JOHN ROCKWELL

-"King Lear" with Paul Scofield being one of the notable recent examples - all will be mounted in new versions for the archival project. "We will do them in a television style which will make them all of a piece," said Richard Somerset-Ward the BBC's representative in the United States. "That style will be contained in Cedric Messina, who will be executive producer for all the productions." Mr. Messina is senior drama producer in the BBC's plays department.

Rather than adapt productions from the established Shakespearean repertory companies in England, RBC will do its own casting for the plays, and will use some of Britain's most renowned actors and directors, Mr. Somerset-Ward indicated.

The plays, he said, will not be produced chronologically, but rather in sequences that will provide an annual mixture of comedies, tragedies and histories. Production is scheduled to begin in 18 months, which means the telecasts. will oot begin until 1978. The actors and directors have not yet been chosen. Remaining to be resolved, before the series can get under way, is a special performance contract with British Equity, the actors union, for long-term rights. The standard contract with the union permits the BBC to use a program for two years, after which it must pay 100 percent of the acting fees for the reruns.

Because the project envisions that the productions will constitute a library of films for schools, as well as for future television use, the special union contract is vital. Moreover, until that question is settled, it is considered unlikely that an American company will commit itself to participate in the financing of the series.

The hero of the London story is, of course, a megnificent dog named Buck, who is atoleo from his comfortable bome and sold to guid pros-pectors in the hrutal setting of the Kinndike in the lete 1890's. The central themes of Londun ood Mr. Dickey, the tensions between civilization and wild nature, mesb extremely well, and the result, put together by Charles Fries Productions, is quite superior televisino, much more true to the London novel than the old film that starred, among nthers, Clark Gable and Lor-

Lennetti as photography director, the film is strewn with stunning scenes, as Thurnton (Juhn Beck) and François (Bernard Fresson, whose French accent is necasionally too thick for full compreheo-sim) play nut their roles of "men groping in the Arctic darkness for the glimmer of Tha music, covering a broad range of schools and styles, is fantastic. The hour is extraordinary.

The television motifs for the day are sports and docu-mentary. At 2 P.M., CBS will carry a live broadcast of Roberto Duran defending his world lightweight boxing champinnship against Lou Bizzaro in a 15-round bout at Erie, Pa. At 3. Channel 13 will feature United States and international champings cominternational champions com-peting at badmintm in the Travelers Open. The genial host is Timnthy Gallwey, whn coaches his students at the Malibu Beach Recquet Club in California. Mr. Gallwey also bappens to bave published a book called "Inner Tennis.

The point of Mr. Gallwey's technique for improving one's game — which seems to be a summer absession with most of the nation — looks to bave been borrowed from "Zen and the Art of Archery." The student must overcome mantal obstacles, develop e trusting self-confidence.

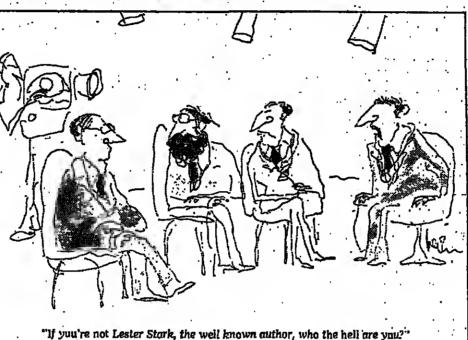

"Stop thinking about it," advises Mr. Gallwey. "Just let your body do it." If you become eware nf what it is, he says, you change. Management

City or Business-Which Is Easier to Run?

By MICHAEL C. JENSEN Five business and financial executives who are helping New York City resolve its financial difficulties agree that in many respects managing a city is more difficult

than managing a husiness.

They cite the complexity of the governmental decision-making process; the absence of controls and long-range planning in the city's financial operations; the difficulty in replacing ineffective city officials, and the scarcity of reliable data.

Executives asked to define the major differences included Kenneth S. Axelson, a seninr vice president of the J. C. Penney Company, who is serving as deputy mayor for finance, and Felix G. Rohatyn, e partner of Lazard Freres & Company and chairman of the Municipal Assistance Corpora-

Also asked to commant were William M. Ellinghaus, vice chairman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and Albert V. Casey, chairman of American Aulines, both members of the Emergency Financial Control Board, and Richard R. Shinn, president of the Metropolitan Lifa Insurance Company and chairman of Mayor Beame's Management Advisory Board.

Kenneth S. Axelson

The biggest difference between managing a husiness and managing the city is in the decision-making process on policy issues. In both cases, consideration is—or should be—given to the long-range objec-tives involved and the shorter-term impact on operations. In addition, a business will evaluate the effect on profits and the company's finances.

In government, however, the overriding factors are often not financial considerations. Instead, the decision will be based on whether the proposed action will help achieve social goals and whether it serves (or at least does not violete) the needs of key constituents.

If a proposed Government action passes these tests, the financing will usually be found. But in business, if a proposed action

Commissions Tumble on Wall Street

Marquette de Bary Co. offers institutional type commission savings up to 75% on all stock transactions to all investors.

Marquette de Bary changes all this for investors who know their own minds. You benefit from our low, low commission schedule regardless of whether you are an institution or a private investor, regardless of

of whether you are an institution of a private investor, segments or where we execute your order. The Labor Scene

Unflappable Jogger a Key Man in G.E. Talks

By A. H. RASKIN

Among the sweatsuited joggers in Central Park these spring mornings is the man who may cast the critical vote on the union side when contract negotiations between the General Electric Company and its 113,800 unionized employees reach the showdown stage June 27.

He is David J. Fitzmaurice. 62-year-old secretary-treas-urer of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (I.U.E.), who will move up to the presidency at the end of this Jennings, a principal archi-tect of the 12-union coalition formed a decade ago to coordinate labor's strategy in contract talks with the nation's biggest electrical manufacturer. Mr. Jermings is retiring because of ill bealth at the age of 58.

The incoming president of the coalition's dominant union is not in gym clothes out of expectation that the current G. E. negotiations will wind up in a battle. Relations between the company and the union, coce at perpetual sword's point over G.E.'s take-it-or-leave-it posture at the bargaining table, have moved into basic tran quility in recent years.

"There has been a remark company's attitude, and it has gone far enough so we know it is not a phony," said Mr. Fitzmaurice. "We don't expect the company will roll over in the current negotia-tions, but we feel it shares our interest in building a still more mature relationship."

A low-keyed, unflappable gradoate of G.E.'a huge electric bulb plant in Cleveland, Mr. Fitzmaurice plans major stress in his new role on developing more effective answers to the challenges presented to unions by the spread of multinational corporations. "We will become a hit more aggressive than we have been in the past couple of years," he declared.

Before tangliog with the multinationals, bowever, the new I.U.E. chief may have to use some of his aggressiveness holding on to his job. Nominations for a full four-year term will be open at the unioo's convention in Miami Beach in September and one challenger already is in the field.

He is William Bywater, an international vice president and head of the 65,000-member New York-New Jersey district. Nominated by acclamation at a meeting of his district executive board last month, Mr. Bywater has pledged not to campaign until contract talks with G.E., the Westinghouse Electric Corporation and other large employers are coocluded. A similar pledge to keep internal politics on the back-burner until after negotiations comes from Mr. Fitzmaurice. In the meantime be commutes between his office commutes between his office in Washington, his borne in Euclid, Ohio, and the three days a week he spends in New York as a member of the G.E. bargaining team. Wherever he travels, the sweatsuit goes with him. He hopes not to have to wear it on the picket line. on the picket line.

Old-Timer Moves Up At Butchers' Union

A year before Samuel Gompers, founder of the American Federation of La-bor, died in 1924, Patrick E. Gorman became head of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, then a union of 6,000 members. When the Amalgamated, now grown to 520,000 members in supermarkets and packing houses, opens its quadrennial convention in San Francisco on June 1, Mr. Gotman will be stepping up, not down. The 83-year-old unionist is relinquishing his post as secretary-treasurer and moving into a newly created one as chairman of the executive board, with most of his old power as the unioo's chief executive officer undimished He is the only survivor among the heads of international unions active in the Gompers era, but that has not lessened the independence of spirit he has always shown in a tradition-encrusted movement. The same year that Mr. Gorman became top officer at the Amalgamated, a young business agent of the Plumbers Union named George Meany began to spread his wings by becoming secre-tary of a council chartered to reform the corrupt huilding trades unions in New York

In the two decades since Mr. Meany was elected president of the merged Amerlcan Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations he and Mr. Gorman have clashed countless times over issues ranging from Vietnam to the expulsion of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters on charges of Twe differed with George Meaoy more than any 10 men, but I'd still vote for him every time I could," said the Amalgamated chief. Io his new post Mr. Gor-man will keep his $60,000 salary and probably get a $10,000 raise. He will also retain editorship of The Butcher Workman, the ion's monthly journal, in which he writes in an exuberant style blended of Walt Whitman and Eugene V. Debs. In all his 53 years at the top, no candidate has ever been nominated to run against him. However, the restructuring of leadership necessitated by Mr. Gorman's move into his constitutionally guaranteed lifetime positioo as board chairman is expected to unleash turmoil at the convectioo over the filling of other executive jobs. "A few differeoces of opinion are healthy for an organizatioo," said Mr. Gorman, a chronic dissenter.

German Labor Leader Offers Some Advice

Heinz O. Vetter, the George Meany of West Ger-many, hreakfasted with the leaders of New York's labor movement at the Plaza Hotel this week, but most of the talk was about banking. Mr. Vetter, who heads the German Federation of Labor, is also chairman of the super-visory board of the Bank fur Gemeinwirtschaft, with as-sets of $8.6 billion.

The great bulk of the bank's stock is owed by the German trade unions and Mr. Vetter was in town to participate in formal opening of a new branch on the 16th floor of 400 Park Avenue to bandle investments and fi-nancial transactions throughout the Western Hemisphere. Harry Van Arsdale Jr., president of this city's Central Labor Council, had a spe-cific investment suggestion and also a reason for oot accepting It.

"You must start a brewery here," he urged. "We used to have 33 breweries in New York, Now we have only one." Then came the caveat: "Our workers are so successful these days that they don't drink as much beer." Mr. Vetter is not putting a brewery high up on the bank's investment list.

Mr. Garvin told the 800 shareholders present that "the various proposals to split up the oil company maka little sense." He said that, "despita the charges being made, there is no lack of competition within the oil industry.'

Various stockholders, howev er, voiced their support for divestiture, James F. Flug, representing the Eenergy Action Committee, a Washington-based group formed to advocate divestiture, told the meeting that if Exxon was broken up into several units the value to shareholders would be more that if the company remained in its present form.

He cootended that last year an independent financial ana-lyst had valoed the company's assets at $158.40 a share at a time when the stock was selling t $87 a share.

Mr. Garvin said he did oot know anything about that spe-cific analysis but it appeared to him that the analysis had not taken account of current habilities, which amounted to some $90 a sbare.

Further Study Urged The Exxoo chairman, for bis part, charged that Congress bad oot adequately studied the divestiture issue and urged members of Coogress to look at the matter seriously and objectively.

Mr. Garvin said that Exxon planned to speod $19 billioo over the next tour years in capital projects. He added that "this is our plan but that we'll be able to spend this amount productively is not a foregone productively it will depend on cooclusioo. It will depend on the busioess climate in which we are allowed to work."

Stockholder interest was also apparent on the question of political contributions. Two of the resolutions introduced by sharebolders at the meeting coocerned this question. Both resolutions were opposed by

In the meanwhile, except for cleaning up the loose ends of the auto case, oo ma-jor import restraint issues are pending. In the case of steel, there will be lengthy negotiations in Geneva. Major restraints seem unlikely to emerge from them.

DISC Inducement Is Likely to Remain

What about exports? First, Congress is chipping away at the tax inducement to ex-ports known as DISC (Domestic International Sales Corporation), but the prospect is that DISC will not be eliminated altogether, as many tax reformers would like. The House tax bill has already tightened the DISC beoefits somewhat and the Senate Finance Committee modified them slightly fur-ther this week. A big test will come on the Senate floor. where the reformers will make DISC elimination a ceoterpiece of their package of amendments, but the final tax hill—assuming one finally passes and goes to the President - will probably leave DISC largely iotact.

Export Emphasis Is Eased by U.S.

Still, the Government as a whole is not so gung-ho about exports as it used to be, oow that the nation's balance of payments in a world of floating exchange rates has largely ceased to be a preoccupa-tion. Stephen M. Dubrul Jr., the oew head of the Export-Import Bank, warned an audience of bankers receotly that "official support for exports is no longer automatically accepted as policy in Washing-

He said that tha bill, which would require the Government to cut unemployment to 3 percent in four years, contains no provisions to increase private financing of the production oeeded to reduce

It's a trend-setting insurance policy to protect sellers and underwriters of private placements.

With the addition of Rule 146 to the Securities Act of 1933, requirements for disclosure have been codified and clorified.

And onyone involved with private placement now needs the same kind of protection currently available to sellers and underwriters of public issues

That's the kind of protection we have been offering with American Home/Notional Union's SEC Liability Insurance—o form of coverage that has become a basic necessity. So, it's only natural that American Home/National Union takes the lead with this important coverage—o quick response to a new need.

One post-divorce oight, while watching TV and hoping the wound would heal, you hear that now bateful song as part of a commercial. What do you think your subliminal attitude toward that product would be?

That situation sums up one of the few negatives about using a so-called copyrighted sone for a commercial. There can't be many oegatives though since so many agencies are using them to give advertising messages a little extra jedge.

that if you begin with a tune that people are familiar with, their ability to hear the copy words is heightened because they only have to assimilate one thing."

Granada Spotter's Guide No. 3

Ford Granada is one of the year's best-selling cars. There are nearly a half-million of them on the road right now.

However, many of these "right-size" Granadas are being mistaken for an imported sedan costing nearly $10,000 more than Granada.

Your Ford Dealers are providing these "Spotter's Gu to assist you in making proper identification.

Seen in profile, as shown above, Granada will show a longer hood line than the "look alike" import.

MOSCOW, May 20—Tha Soviet newspaper Trud today deplored the 1867 sale of Alaska to the United States as "the most disadvantage ous deal in the cotire bistory of Czarist Russia."

The remark was published pn the paper's back page in response to a letter from a reader in Kiev who wanted to know "who of the Russian seafarers first landed on the shores of Alaska," and why was it sold to the U.S.A. and for what price?"

What Legislators Want

The Governor presented his proposals to the Democratic leoders of the Legislature this afternoon during a three-hour meeting. The leaders reportedly told him that his 18-page statement was too vague to be satisfactory. They asked him for a new draft that would precisely detail the state's commitment for eventual full-finoncing of the City University's senior colleges.

The Board of Estimate on being the first time are the funds, and the City Council had the right to reallocate the funds. He added: "The Mayor would have no objection."

Although the leaders offered the Governor no promises that their could deliver their members for the plan, the basic tone of the meeting was one of cooperation.
